Sunday's Readings: the Baptism of the Lord
Isaiah 42:1-4,6-7 The Servant of the Lord has come not to glorify himself but to do the work of God in restoring a fallen world.

Acts 10: 34-38 The baptism of Cornelius and his entire household is a potent reminder that God shows no partiality.

Matthew 3: 13-17 The Lord is not interested in protecting his prerogatives but in accomplishing what the Father desires. His compliance to the will of the Father is a model for all .

Discussion Question: Do I keep in contact with my Godparents and thank them for their faith and commitment to me?

Commento: La scena del battesimo diventa, allora, la proclamazione dell' unicit  assoluta di questo Messia "Figlio prediletto", della unicit  della sua azione liberatrice e salvifica." –G. Ravasi

Comentario del domingo "La obediencia a Cristo y la iglesia seguir  siendo una obligaci n para cada cristiano en el mundo." A. von Rechnitz Gonz lez

FROM THE PASTOR

The birth of Jesus has put flesh on the salvific plan of God, it is no longer merely a promise for the future, it is the future made present in the birth of the child Jesus. A child destined to embrace fully his humanity and to grant us all a full share in his divinity. Baptism marks this moment of decision that the mere birth could not attest, their the eyes of those present at the birth we see the future promise but at the baptism we are allowed to see and hear this wonderful exchange of humanity and divinity that would mark the Pascal ministry of Jesus.
