Does that which is evil tend to make us lose our trust in God? Sometimes, but it shouldn't.

Yes, the temptation to lose our trust in God may occur when an event happens which has no other explanation, except that it had to be a force of evil which was its cause.

But, it doesn't have to be that way. For example, later on the day of September 11, 2001, and for a day or two thereafter, I sat in church and watched more people coming into it to simply offer a private prayer. One person after another! The terrorists did evil by purposefully killing thousands of innocent people. Yet, for many, in spite of evil being victorious on that morning, people of faith, directly and indirectly affected by the evil act, came to the church, placing trust in God, believing He will protect us in the future.

Consequently, when evil is the obvious explanation for whatever happens in your life, do not let evil bring more havoc into it by losing your trust in God.

Peace,
