June 7, 2020

Interesting phenomena happens to me whenever I go to Home Depot, in Totowa.

Not surprising to anyone who knows me, I always walk into a store dressed in my black clerical shirt, black pants and black shoes. And, most recently, with a white mask.

(Come to think about it, I must look really weird. But, I guess I will never be asked for directions to find an item in the store, by a customer). ☺

Anyway, nearly every time I inquire about finding an item, during the search an employee will eventually begin speaking about God, church, faith, Jesus, and/or say “God bless you.” That is so interesting. I have never met the employee and he/she is sharing his/her faith with me- a masked man dressed as a priest!

Over and over again, I have heard people tell me the citizens of our nation have lost faith in God. Well, I don't think so. And, those who have not lost faith in God are not only the employees working for Home Depot.

I believe when you are feel free to be a person of faith in God while with others, you'll find more often than not, you are standing next to a person with faith in God too!

Live the faith. Then, share it. You'll be surprised there are others out there like us!

Peace,
Fr. Marc
