Eighteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

The parable of the rich fool is found only in Luke. El Mishnah has a section on inheritance, to guide the rabbis when they are consulted. Jesus eschews family disputes over money. Man is a stern salutation in the Gospel. The Greek text of the Gospel implies that a real and meaningful life cannot be drawn out of an abundance of material possessions. A similar dialogue is recorded in the apocryphal Gospel of Thomas. The doctrine of the Cross is exemplified by the parable, in which the main thrust is not sudden death but the continuing eschatological judgment of the Spirit's presence.

The periscope on greed of the rich barn-builder as distinctively Lucan, explains that the hopes to divide an inheritance equally or to enlarge a growing business, understandable in themselves, run against the contention that a strong interest in material possessions is not reconcilable with interest in God. Ideally Christians are asked to live by the maxim "one's life does not depend on what one possesses". The fate of the barn-builder reflects the expectation of an individual judgment taking place before the general judgment at the end of the world.

Decimoctavo Domingo del Tiempo Ordinario

La parábola del rico tonto se encuentra solo en Lucas. El Mishnah tiene una sección sobre herencia, para guiar a los rabinos cuando son consultados. Jesús evita las disputas familiares por el dinero. El hombre es un saludo severo en el Evangelio. El texto griego del Evangelio implica que una vida real y significativa no puede extraerse de una abundancia de posesiones materiales. Un diálogo similar se registra en el apócrifo Evangelio de Tomás. La doctrina de la Cruz se ejemplifica en la parábola, en la cual el impulso principal no es la muerte súbita sino el continuo juicio escatológico de la presencia del Espíritu.

El periscopio sobre la codicia del rico constructor de graneros como distintivamente Lucan, explica que las esperanzas de dividir una herencia equitativamente o de ampliar un negocio en crecimiento, comprensible en sí mismas, van en contra de la afirmación de que un fuerte interés en las posesiones materiales no es compatible con el interés en Dios. Idealmente, se les pide a los cristianos que vivan según la máxima "la vida de uno no depende de lo que uno posee". El destino del constructor del granero refleja la expectativa de un juicio individual que tendrá lugar antes del juicio general del fin del mundo.
