Our Lady of Sorrows (Sep - 15)

Conversion of a Sinner through the Intercession of Our Lady of Sorrows: In the revelations of St. Bridget we read that there was a rich man, as noble by birth as he was vile and sinful in his habits. He had given himself, by an express compact, as a slave to the devil; and for sixty successive years had served him, leading such a life as may be imagined, and never approached the sacraments. Now this prince was dying; and Jesus Christ, to show him mercy, commanded St. Bridget to tell her confessor to go and visit him and exhort him to confess his sins. The confessor went and the sick man said that he did not require confession, as he had often approached the sacrament of Penance. The priest went a second time; but this poor slave of hell persevered in his obstinate determination not to confess. Jesus again told the saint to have her confessor return. He did so; and of the third occasion told the sick man the revelation made to the saint, and that he had returned so many times because our Lord, who wished to show him mercy, had so ordered. On hearing this dying man was touched, and began to weep: "But how," he exclaimed, "can I be saved; I, who for sixty years have served the devil as his slave, and have my soul burdened with innumerable sins?" "My son, answered the Father, encouraging him, "doubt not; if you repent of them, on the part of God I promise you pardon." Then, gaining confidence, he said to the confessor, "Father, I looked upon myself as lost, and already despaired of salvation; but now I feel a sorrow for my sins, which gives me confidence; and since God has not yet abandoned me, I will make my confession." In fact, he made his confession four times on that day, with the greatest marks of sorrow, and on the following morning received holy Communion. On the sixth day, contrite and resigned, he died. After his death, Jesus Christ again spoke to St. Bridget, and told her that the sinner was saved; that he was then in purgatory, and that he owed his salvation to the intercession of the Blessed Virgin His Mother; for the deceased, although he had led so wicked a life, had nevertheless always had a great love and compassion for His Blessed Mother's Sorrows.

Nuestra Señora de los Dolores (15 de Septiembre)

Conversión de un pecador a través de la intercesión de Nuestra Señora de los Dolores: En las revelaciones de Santa Brígida leemos que había un hombre rico, tan noble de nacimiento como vil y pecador en sus hábitos. Se había entregado, por un pacto expreso, como esclavo del diablo; y durante sesenta años sucesivos le había servido, llevando una vida como se puede imaginar, y nunca se acercó a los sacramentos. Ahora este príncipe estaba muriendo; y Jesucristo, para mostrarle misericordia, ordenó a Santa Brígida que le dijera a su confesor que fuera a visitarlo y lo exhortara a confesar sus pecados. El confesor fue y el enfermo dijo que no requería confesión, ya que muchas veces se había acercado al sacramento de la Penitencia. El sacerdote fue por segunda vez; pero este pobre esclavo del infierno perseveró en su obstinada determinación de no confesar. Jesús nuevamente le dijo a la santa que hiciera regresar a su confesor. Así lo hizo; y de la tercera ocasión le contó al enfermo la revelación hecha al santo, y que tantas veces había vuelto porque nuestro Señor, que quiso mostrarle misericordia, así lo había ordenado. Al escuchar a este moribundo se conmovió y se echó a llorar: "¿Pero cómo, exclamó, puedo salvarme yo, que durante sesenta años he servido al diablo como esclavo suyo, y tengo el alma cargada de innumerables pecados?" "Hijo mío, respondió el Padre, animándolo, "no dudes; si te arrepientes de ellos, de parte de Dios te prometo perdón". Entonces, ganando confianza, le dijo al confesor: "Padre, me veía a mí mismo como perdido, y ya desesperaba de la salvación; pero ahora siento un dolor por mis pecados, lo que me da confianza; y como Dios aún no me ha abandonado". , Haré mi confesión ". De hecho, se confesó cuatro veces ese día, con las mayores muestras de dolor, y a la mañana siguiente recibió la Sagrada Comunión. Al sexto día, arrepentido y resignado, murió. Después de su muerte, Jesucristo volvió a hablar con santa Brígida y le dijo que el pecador era salvo; que entonces estaba en el purgatorio, y que debía su salvación a la intercesión de la Santísima Virgen Su Madre; porque el difunto, aunque había llevado una vida tan perversa, siempre había tenido un gran amor y compasión por los dolores de Su Santísima Madre.
