From Deacon John...

Mark writes of the Jewish observance of ritual-purity laws. Scholars believe that he did this because many in Mark's community were not Jewish Christians. Mark stressed the teachings of Jesus were for all, not a unique few. His words challenge us too. Jesus teaches we are called to holiness because our Father is holy. In our desire to show that we are holy, it is easy to give too much credence to externals, following rules without thinking about the intention behind them. Jesus reminds us that actions do not make us holy.

Marcos escribe sobre la observancia judía de las leyes de pureza ritual. Los eruditos creen que él hizo esto porque muchos en la comunidad de Marcos no eran cristianos judíos. Marcos enfatizó que las enseñanzas de Jesús eran para todos, no pocas. Sus palabras nos desafían. Jesús enseña que somos llamados a la santidad porque nuestro Padre es santo. En nuestro deseo de mostrar que somos santos, es fácil dar demasiada credibilidad a lo externo, seguir las reglas sin pensar en la intención detrás de ellas. Jesús nos recuerda que no nos hacemos santos con nuestras acciones.

Question of the Week

22nd Sunday – Mark 7:1-8, 14-15, 21-23

Key Passage: Jesus responded, "Well did Isaiah prophesy about you hypocrites, as it is written: This people honors me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me; in vain do they worship me, teaching as doctrines human precepts. You disregard God's commandment but cling to human tradition."

Question for adults: What are the priorities of your life? Do those values match your words and actions?

Question for children: Why do your mother and father have "rules" for your family life?

Pregunta de la Semana

22° Domingo-- Marcos 7:1-8, 14-15, 21-23

Pasaje Crucial: Jesús les contestó: "¡Qué bien profetizó Isaías sobre ustedes, hipócritas, cuando escribió: Este pueblo me honra con los labios, pero su corazón está lejos de mí. Es inútil el culto que me rinden, porque enseñan doctrinas que no son sino preceptos humanos! Ustedes dejan a un lado el mandamiento de Dios, para aferrarse a las tradiciones de los hombres".

Pregunta para los adultos: ¿Cuáles son las prioridades de tu vida? ¿Los valores coinciden con tus palabras y acciones?

Pregunta para los niños: ¿Por qué tu madre y tu padre tienen muchas "reglas" para tu vida familiar?

Jesus teaches we are called to holiness because our Father is holy and we are created in the image of the Father.

In our desire to show that we are indeed holy, it is easy to give too much credence to externals, following rules without thinking about the intention behind them. Jesus reminds us that we do not make ourselves holy by our actions. Rather, we become holy when we allow God's Spirit to transform us. Our actions reflect an expression of the conversion of our heart to God and to God's ways.

Pittsburgh priest: Catholics angered by abuse reports deserve a hearing

By Editor, Catholic News Service, August 29, 2018

Vatican City, (CNA/EWTN News)

The Catholics who are demoralized, angered, or scandalized by revelations about sex abuse must feel free to talk to clergy and other Catholics, and other Catholics must reach out to them, a priest of the Diocese of Pittsburgh has said.

"I would invite those who are wavering to be open about their concerns, their anger, their frustration, their questions, so that someone can respond to them," Father Nicholas Vaskov, director of communications for the Pittsburgh diocese, told CNA.

"I would also encourage them to stay close to God in prayer so that he can hear their calls to him and respond with his compassion and love."

Father Vaskov, reflected on the tendency of some people scandalized by abuse allegations to stop going to Mass. He encouraged Catholic clergy and laity to "be patient with those who are scandalized by the reports."

"I would also suggest that clergy and laity reach out to those who they know are particularly troubled by what they have learned. Thoughtful conversation can be such an effective way to process what is troubling us."

On Aug. 14 a Pennsylvania grand jury released its report claiming to have identified more than 1,000 victims of 300 credibly accused priests from 1947 to 2017 across six Pennsylvania dioceses. It presented a portrait of efforts by Church authorities to ignore, obscure, or cover up allegations, either to protect accused priests or to spare the Church scandal.

Approximately two-thirds of the accused priests have died. Due to laws regarding the statute of limitations, nearly every abuse allegation cannot be criminally prosecuted, although two indictments have been filed. One priest named in the report was convicted of sexually assaulting a student in the early 1990s.

Before the report's release, Bishop David Zubik of Pittsburgh confirmed that some of the priests named in the Pennsylvania grand jury report into sexual abuse remain in active ministry, but stressed that none faced substantiated allegations of child sexual abuse.

Responding to the report, Zubik emphasized that "the Diocese of Pittsburgh today is not the Church that is described in the grand jury report," and that "it has not been for a long time." Data from the diocese showed that more than 90 percent of abuse incidents took place before 1990. The bishop apologized to victims of clergy sex abuse and to "any person (Anger continued) or family whose trust, faith and well-being has been devastated by men who were ordained to be the image of Christ."

The Catholic response is ongoing. The grand jury report could affect the future of Cardinal Donald Wuerl of Washington, a previous Bishop of Pittsburgh. Wuerl is already a center of controversy as critics ask what he knew of allegations of sex abuse and sexual exploitation against his predecessor, Archbishop Theodore McCarrick.

Father Vaskov cited his experiences with churchgoers who went to Mass in the wake of the latest news. He also reflected on what churchgoers told him, such as one woman at Mass last Sunday.

"She said that while it was difficult for her to go, she knew that she couldn't be anywhere else because it is only in the Eucharist that we can be renewed," the priest said. "Another conversation with a recent convert to the Catholic faith revealed the depth of his love for Christ and His Church and his desire to stay close to the sacraments when he felt his frustration was getting the better of him."

Fr. Vaskov said that in response to the abuse scandals, many parishes had organized holy hours, days of Eucharistic adoration, discussion groups, and listening sessions. He said he has had "beautiful moments" praying with people for "strength in their lives and in the lives of those who have been harmed by abuse."

"I have also had some very fruitful conversations with parishioners, friends and strangers over the past weeks because they were willing to open up about their concerns," the priest said. "That doesn't mean that every issue is resolved or every suffering is healed, but it is the beginning of an important discussion that needs to happen."
