Third Sunday of Easter, Year C, Tercer Domingo de Pascua, el año C del evangelio de San Lucas May / Mayo 5, 2019

From Deacon John...

The Gospels for the Easter Season are taken from the Gospel of John. Today is one of the post-Resurrection appearances. Because there are significant differences between this report and the other appearances described in John's Gospel, it is quite likely that this story is from a different source. There are details in the story that recall Jesus' call to Simon Peter and the other fishermen as well as the miraculous catch of fish also in Luke. The end of the chapter, where Jesus asks Peter three times whether he loves him, most likely is meant to represent the reconciliation that occurred between the community represented by John's Gospel with the larger Christian community represented by Peter. This Gospel reading is a rich story that speaks of Jesus' presence in the Eucharist and our commission to serve others as Jesus did.

Los evangelios para el tiempo pascual están tomados del evangelio de Juan. Hoy es una de las apariciones posteriores a la resurrección. Debido a que existen diferencias significativas entre este informe y las otras apariciones descritas en el Evangelio de Juan, es muy probable que esta historia sea de una fuente diferente. Hay detalles en la historia que recuerdan el llamado de Jesús a Simón Pedro y los otros pescadores, así como la captura milagrosa de peces. El final del capítulo, donde Jesús le pregunta a Pedro tres veces si lo ama, lo más probable es que represente la reconciliación que se produjo entre la comunidad representada por el Evangelio de Juan y la comunidad cristiana más grande representada por Pedro. Esta lectura del Evangelio es una rica historia que habla de la presencia de Jesús en la Eucaristía y nuestra comisión de servir a los demás como lo hizo Jesús.

Question of the Week

Third Sunday of Easter – John 21:1-19

Key Passage:

Jesus said to them, "Bring some of the fish you just caught." So Simon Peter went over and dragged the net ashore full of one hundred fifty-three large fish. Even though there were so many, the net was not torn. Jesus said to them, "Come, have breakfast." And none of the disciples dared to ask him, "Who are you?" because they realized it was the Lord.

Question for adults: How do you think the Church could better accommodate the vast diversity of its membership.

Question for children: In what parts of your life do you think most about Jesus? Why?

Pregunta de la Semana

Tercer Domingo de Pascua-- Juan 21:1-19

Pasaje Crucial:

Jesús les dijo: "Traigan algunos pescados de los que acaban de pescar". Entonces Simón Pedro subió a la barca y arrastró hasta la orilla la red, repleta de pescados grandes. Eran ciento cincuenta y tres, y a pesar de que eran tantos, no se rompió la red. Luego les dijo Jesús: "Vengan a almorzar". Y ninguno de los discípulos se atrevió a preguntarle: "¿Quién eres?", porque ya sabían que era el Señor.

Pregunta para los adultos: ¿Cómo crees que la Iglesia podría adaptarse mejor a la gran diversidad de miembros?

Pregunta para los niños: ¿¿En qué partes de tu vida piensas más acerca de Jesús? ¿Por qué?

Pope concerned over growing threat of "conflictual nationalism", nuclear war

By Robin Gomes, Vatican News, May 2, 2019

(Vatican News) Pope Francis on Thursday expressed concern over the re-emergence of aggressive feelings against foreigners, especially immigrants, as well as a growing nationalism that neglects the common good, saying such trends compromise international cooperation, mutual respect and the sustainable development goals of the United Nations.

Speaking to some 50 members of the Vatican's Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences, the Holy Father expressed fears over the growing threat of nuclear confrontation that risks cancelling the progress of the recent past and multiplies the risk of war. The Pope spoke to the Pontifical Academy in the light of its May 1-3 plenary assembly on "Nation, State, Nation-State", in the backdrop of a growing trend in exclusivist nationalism.

Migration, conflictual nationalism

The Pope pointed out that the Church has always urged the love of one's own people and country while respecting the various cultures, customs and habits of other peoples. At the same time it has warned against deviations in this attachment that result in excluding and hating others when it becomes "conflictual nationalism that raises walls, even racism or anti-Semitism."

He noted that, too often, states are subservient to the interests of a dominant group, mostly for economic profit, which oppresses the ethnic, linguistic or religious minorities who are in their territory. On the contrary, the Pope pointed out, "the way in which a nation welcomes migrants reveals its vision of human dignity and its relationship with humanity."

He urged that a person or a family, forced to leave their own land, be welcomed with humanity. In this regard he repeated his 4-verb formula of how to receive a migrant, namely: welcoming, protecting, promoting and integrating.

While stressing that the migrant is not a threat to the culture, customs and values of the host nation, the migrant also has a duty to integrate into the receiving nation, enriching the host while maintaining his identity.

Pope Francis pointed out that migration is a permanent feature of human history, and all nations are the result of the integration of successive waves of people or groups of migrants, who while being images of the diversity of humanity, are united by common values, cultural resources and healthy customs.

"A state that arouses the nationalistic feelings of its own people against other nations or groups of people would fail in its mission," he warned, adding history proves where such deviations lead to.

Multilateralism

Speaking about the nation-state, the Pope said it cannot be regarded as absolute and an island in relation to its surroundings and on its own; it cannot provide its people with the common good and meet the great contemporary challenges of climate change, new slavery and peace. The cooperative vision among nations, the Pope said, requires the relaunching of multilateralism, which is opposed to new nationalistic impulses and hegemonic policy.

"Humanity would thus avoid the threat of recourse to armed conflicts whenever a dispute arises between nation-states, as well as evading the danger of economic and ideological colonization of the superpowers, avoiding the overwhelming of the strongest over the weakest, paying attention to the global dimension without losing sight of the local, national and regional dimensions."

As opposed to a globalization that suffocates localization and leads to hegemonic imperialism, he called for a "multifaceted" form based on mutual recognition between the collective identity of each people, nation and globalization itself, which leads to peace and harmony.

The multilateral bodies, the Pope said, have been created in the hope of being able to replace the logic of revenge, domination, oppression and conflict with that of dialogue, mediation, compromise, harmony and the awareness of belonging to the same humanity in the common home.

On the other hand, the growing hegemony of powers and interest groups that impose their own visions and ideas, as well as new forms of ideological colonization, disregarding identity, customs and habits, dignity and sensitivity of the peoples. The emergence of this is weakening the multilateral system, with the result of a lack of credibility in international politics and a progressive marginalization of the most vulnerable members of the family of nations.

Nuclear threat

Pope Francis lamented that multilateral nuclear disarmament no longer stirs the conscience of nations that possess weapons. The Pope said, a season of worrying nuclear confrontation seems to be opening, as it cancels the progress of the past and multiplies risk. If offensive and defensive nuclear arms will now be placed on earth and space, the Pope warned, the so-called new technical frontier will have raised and not lowered the danger of a nuclear holocaust.
