Fifth Sunday of Easter, Year C, Quintoto Domingo de Pascua, el año C del evangelio de San Lucus May / Mayo 19, 2019

From Deacon John...

Today's Gospel comes from John. Like last week, we hear words spoken by Jesus before his death and Resurrection while teaching at the Last Supper. John does not present a sentimental view of love. Rather, he highlights love that is manifest in service and sacrifice, a choice difficult for us to make when faced with hatred and anger. Jesus disciples are to be known because of the love they show for one another. This description of the early Christian community will be repeated in the Acts of the Apostles: "See how they love one another." This type of love is the hallmark of Christianity. We see it lived in the witness of the martyrs, in the lives of the saints, in all the women and men who live and love daily, making small and large sacrifices for others.

El evangelio de hoy viene de Juan. Como la semana pasada, escuchamos palabras pronunciadas por Jesús antes de su muerte y resurrección mientras enseñábamos en la Última Cena. Juan no presenta una visión sentimental del amor. Más bien, destaca el amor que se manifiesta en el servicio y el sacrificio, una elección difícil para nosotros cuando nos enfrentamos al odio y la ira. Los discípulos de Jesús deben ser conocidos por el amor que se muestran unos a otros. Esta descripción de la comunidad cristiana primitiva se repetirá en los Hechos de los Apóstoles: "Mira cómo se aman". Este tipo de amor es el sello distintivo del cristianismo. Lo vemos vivido en el testimonio de los mártires, en las vidas de los santos, en todas las mujeres y hombres que viven y aman diariamente, haciendo sacrificios grandes y grandes por los demás.

Pope to healthcare workers: treat the sick as people, not as numbers

By Lydia O’Kane, Vatican News, May 17, 2019

(Vatican News) At the core of the Pope’s discourse to members of the Association was the defense, respect and promotion of life. Conscientious objection The practice of conscientious objection, the Pontiff stressed, in exand promotion of life.

He thanked those gathered on Friday for their “irreplaceable service” to people who are most vulnerable or in need of assistance because they are sick, or elderly, or marginalized.

Noting how in recent decades, the system of care and treatment had changed radically, the Pope also pointed out that along with advances in technology, ever greater problems of an ethical nature were also being presented.

Pope Francis underlined that, “any medical practice or intervention on the human being must first be evaluated carefully to see if it actually respects life and human dignity.”

treme cases where the integrity of human life is endangered, was based “on the personal need not to act differently from one’s own ethical conviction, but also represents a sign for the health care environment in which one finds oneself, as well as for the patients themselves and their families”, he said.

However, Pope Francis underlined, the choice of objection, must be made with respect and humility, so it does not end up becoming a reason for contempt or pride.

The Pope said, that in these situations an exchange of dialogue was a key ingredient, “especially with those who have different positions”.

Pope Francis invited those present to look to the humanity of Christ who taught that each individual “is not a number, but a person, unique and unrepeatable.”

During his address, the Pope referred to corporate efficiency and cost reduction that often puts the needs of the patient in second place, rather than being accompanied through their illness.

Training and the safeguarding of healthcare professionals

The Pope also pointed to how important it was for healthcare professionals to have adequate safeguards in their work to avoid the risk of “burnout” while caring for others.

Noting the Association’s involvement in the field of training, he encouraged them to pay particular attention to spirituality, so that this fundamental dimension of the person, often neglected in our time but so important, is rediscovered and appreciated, especially for those who live with illness or are close to those who suffer.”
