My dear family,

I wonder how often it has happened that a moment of grace has come and gone in humanity's history. I am talking about those moments where a person with a specific task or message from God never delivered and no connection was made. Perhaps because we are all called to journey toward holiness, we are all works in progress never getting every opportunity to be His vessel. As Our Lord, the perfect psychologist put it best at His execution: "Forgive them, Father, they know not what they do." However, to aid us toward holiness and to decrease these ships passing in the night, we can be better disciples by consciously making a constant decision to take an inventory of those things that bias us and distract us for hearing God's will for our lives. No matter our affection for a person or thing, we should be freed from any constraint when God calls us to act on His behalf. It is not Our Lord's goal here to unreasonably ask that we lose all of our affections or preferences. The only thing needed is to keep an eye on them, lest we become God's worst enemy and a stumbling block to His grace. Have a blessed week!

In His joy, Rev. Fr. Daniel J. Gutierrez
