pastor's Corner

Dear family,

Where do you find your greatest struggle? Some deal with emotional insecurities from what they have suffered. Some people struggle with physical ailments like hearing or vision problems. Others are tormented with depression or anxiety, or both! Everyone struggles with limitations in one form or another and our feeble attempts to hide our brokenness only masks what eventually comes out one way or another. In our second reading St. Paul addresses his own brokenness. "That I, Paul, might not become too elated, because of the abundance of the revelations, a thorn in the flesh was given to me, an angel of Satan, to beat me, to keep me from being too elated." Scholars have long argued what exactly he was referring to since he does not make it clear. Some think he had anger issues, others felt he struggled with great sexual temptation while some opine that he may have had a speech impediment. We don't know. Then again, it really doesn't matter what he was referring to, does it? The greater truth that inspired Paul applies to any issue, it's importance rings true for any struggle with sin or brokenness. Instead of masking an issue, pretending to be invincible, or waiting for the "right time" to follow God's path, Paul makes it clear that God can work even in our weakness. The truth here is that God's limitations are not ours and He can work through us, sometimes despite us. Paul experienced the liberation of realizing that neither the number nor the severity of speedbumps along the way have to define one's success. In other words, for better or worse, it's not all up to us. None of us like to run into problems, especially when they are internal and we risk being labeled as weak, but these are all reminders that God is the one in control ultimately and His goodness is without end.

In His joy, Fr. Daniel
