Second Sunday of Easter (Or Sunday of the Divine Mercy)

In the story of the Gospel today Jesus said to Thomas: Bring your hand and feel the place of the nails, and do not be unbelieving but believing, alleluia.

Isolated in our own little world, overwhelmed by the anxieties that are part of life's everyday struggles, we can become paralyzed by fear, mired in skepticism. But the outrageous news of Easter calls us to see beyond our own fears, sorrows and anger and recognize the blessings we have received and the blessings we have to give. The Crucified Jesus walks in our midst in the poor, the sick, and the suffering; Christ invites us to take his hand and touch his wounded side by bringing his comfort and healing to others. With an openness of heart and a generosity of spirit, we can transform our own lives and the world around us in the possibilities of the Easter miracle.
