Divine Worship

Continuing from Archdiocesan Liturgical Handbook (ALH) Chapter 1J states:

Section 1.61.2: The Precious Blood may not be reserved, except for giving Communion to someone who is sick and is unable to consume the host.²⁴²

Section 1.61.3: The reverence due to the Precious Blood of the Lord demands that it be fully consumed after Communion is completed and never be poured into the ground or the sacarium.²⁴³

Section 1.61.4: As for any consecrated hosts that are left, the priest either consumes them at the altar or carries them to the place designated for the reservation of the Eucharist. Upon returning to the altar, he collects any fragments that may remain.²⁴⁴

Section 1.61.5: The sacred vessels are purified by the priest, deacon, or an instituted acolyte after Communion either at the altar or at a credence table, or for good reason after Mass at a credence table. The purification of the chalice is done with water alone or with wine and water, which is then drunk by whoever does the purification. The paten is usually wiped clean with the purificator.²⁴⁵

Section 1.61.6: Whenever a fragment of the host adheres to his fingers, especially after the fraction or the Communion of the faithful, the priest is to wipe his fingers over the paten or, if necessary, wash them. Likewise, he should also gather any fragments that may have fallen outside the paten.²⁴⁶

Section 1.61.7: Then, standing at the altar or at the credence table, he purifies the paten or ciborium over the chalice then purifies the chalice, saying quietly, Quod ore sumpsimus (What has passed our lips), and dries the chalice with a purificator. If the vessels are purified at the altar, they are carried to the credence table by a minister. Nevertheless, it is also permitted, especially if there are several vessels to be purified, to leave them suitably covered on a corporal, either at the altar or at the credence table, and to purify them immediately after Mass following the dismissal of the people.²⁴⁷

Section 1.61.8: If such purification by ordinary ministers proves pastorally problematic, consideration should be given to distribution of Holy Communion by intinction or to the distribution of Holy Communion under the form of bread alone.²⁴⁸

"For Where your treasure is, there also will be your heart."—Luke 12:34

Dear Friends,

Our Lord Jesus Christ is encouraging all of us to build the kingdom of God first. We need to invest in this kingdom which is a very important place—a place known as heaven. Things of the world will pass but God's things will remain forever. All our time and effort should go towards achieving this.
