

SCRIPTURE READINGS

THIRTY-SECOND SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

First Reading: 2 Maccabees 7:1-2, 9-14

A king tortured a Jewish family, and tried to make them violate the laws. They all refused to give in and violate the laws. All of the family members told the king they would rather die at his hands than surrender their hope of being resurrected by God.

Second Reading: 2

Thessalonians 2:16—3:5

Paul prays that the Thessalonians will be strengthened by God. He also asks them to pray that God's word will continue to spread, despite the persecution of Christians that was occurring at that time.

Gospel: Luke 20:27-38

Jesus encountered some Sadducees who did not believe in resurrection. Jesus refuted them by quoting Moses, who called the Lord the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Jesus then said, "God is not the God of the dead but of the living. All are alive for him."

Bringing the Gospel into Your Family

Today's Gospel: Luke 20: 27-38

Children are naturally curious about heaven. We might answer their curiosity with what we believe but making it clear that no one really knows what heaven is like. Invite your child to draw a picture as s/he imagines heaven.

Discussion Starters

1. When someone asks what I believe about heaven, I will tell them . . .
2. Even though I don't understand many things Jesus taught, my faith helps me know . . .
3. My faith in the resurrection really helped me when . . .

FAMILY PRAYER

Praying together as a family helps children understand that God is an important part of family life. Here is a short morning prayer that you might say before breakfast or before the children go off to school.

Morning Prayer

Dear God,
As I begin this day,
keep me in your love and care.
Help me to live as your child today.
Bless me, my family,
and my friends in all we do.
Keep us all close to you. Amen.

SAINTS OF NOVEMBER

DOROTHY DAY

Feast Day: November 29, 1908

Cause for Canonization: Servant of God

There are people all around us every day who live saintly lives. Some of them may even be called "saint" in the future by the Church. Dorothy Day was a woman who, much like Blessed Teresa of Calcutta, was sometimes called a saint in her work. Dorothy was born in Brooklyn N.Y. in 1897. The family moved to San Francisco and then Chicago, where they lived in poorer housing when Dorothy's father lost his job. Even though Dorothy was young, she knew what it was like to feel shame over one's living conditions. And as a youngster, she loved to read inspiring stories of people who did good things in the world.

She attended college in Illinois but dropped out to take a job as a newspaper reporter in New York. The paper she worked for operated under the belief that all property and possessions should be owned by communities, not be individual persons, so that through sharing, there was always enough for everyone to live on. She joined groups of people protesting the United States' involvement in World War I and joined groups that rallied for women in the U.S. to be able to vote in elections.

Her family had attended services at an Episcopal church, but Dorothy was drawn to the Catholic faith and attended Mass in New York, Chicago, and New Orleans, when she worked in those cities as a reporter. Where her daughter was born in 1927, Dorothy felt sure it was important to have her baptized and give her a Catholic upbringing and she formally joined the Catholic Church.

Working as a reporter for Catholic magazines in New York, she prayed to the Blessed Mother to help her to use her talents to help the working poor. She soon met a man named Peter Maurin who told her to use her journalism skills to start a newspaper that could educate people about the teachings of the Catholic Church and how they related to social justice for people. Her kitchen table in her Greenwich Village apartment became her office, and she sold the paper, The Catholic Worker, for a penny a copy so that almost anyone could buy and read it. When word began to travel about the things Dorothy wrote, people who didn't have enough food or a place to live began to come to her for help. Her home became a place where people could stay when they had nowhere else to go.

Eventually, Dorothy and others at her newspaper began to lease apartments and houses and even farms where people could go to stay. These were known then, and are still today, as Catholic Worker houses. When the Depression hit, a lot of people needed this help.

Not everyone liked Dorothy or agreed with her, especially when she wrote that war was wrong, and that the U.S. should not be involved. Dorothy and other members of the Catholic Worker movement also protested against nuclear weapons and were arrested many times for this. She also believed in equal rights for persons of all colors and backgrounds and took part in civil rights demonstrations in the late 1950's. Pope Paul VI invited her to receive communion from him in Rome in 1967, a sign of honor for her work. When she became too ill to travel, Dorothy was visited by people like Mother Teresa of Calcutta, who gave her a cross usually worn only by her orders' Sisters.

She died in 1980, but during her life when people called her a saint, Dorothy did not like the term. However, the effort began in 1983 to have her canonized, and Pope John Paul II gave the Archdiocese of New York permission in 2000 to open the cause for sainthood.
