WANTING IT ALL

The Gospel, as scholars generally point out, presents allegorically in summary form the history of salvation. The landowner is God, and the vineyard is the people of Israel with their privileged position as God's chosen people (cf Is 5:1-7). The tenants are the religious and political leaders who reject and maltreat the servants, the prophets sent by God again and again. The son of the vineyard owner is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. He is the stone that the builders rejected that has become the cornerstone.

The parable highlights the importance of stewardship. The punishment that comes upon the treacherous tenants is a consequence of their failure to acknowledge that they are stewards, not owners, of the vineyard. Stewardship is being entrusted with the care of something. Necessarily, it always entails accountability. This described in terms of "producing the fruits" for the owner of the vineyard.

Throughout the parable, there is an emphasis on the importance of producing or bearing fruit. At the beginning, the owner sends servants to the tenants "to obtain his produce" (v 34). When the wicked tenants fail to deliver, the vineyard is taken away from them and is leased to "other tenants who will give him the produce at the proper times" (v 41). At the end, it is the Kingdom of God that is given to "a people that will produce its fruit" (v 43).

The need to bear fruit— this applies also to relationships among people. Once a relationship ceases to be fruitful, it begins to die. This is also true of true discipleship. Once the follower of Jesus stops yielding the "good fruit" the lord expects, the person ceases to be a disciple.

Aside from their failure to bear good fruits, the wicked tenants fail in stewardship. They are also guilty of coveting what rightly belongs to the owner of the vineyard. For many people, desire is a good motivator in order to achieve goals that have been set and accomplish tasks that have been planned. But when desire means "wanting it all" regardless of the means utilized, then it becomes covetousness. The very motive that moves one to excel becomes an obsession that leads to one's own destruction.
