TWENTY-NINTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

The Temptation of Power

Jesus has intimated for the third time to his disciples that they are going to Jerusalem where he will be condemned and killed, in the manner of the mysterious Suffering Servant of God who by his suffering “shall justify the many” (Is 53:11). With a touch of irony, Mark records that at this solemn and sorrowful occasion, the Zebedee brothers are lost in their political illusions of religious triumphalism. They ask Jesus a share of power and profess to merit it by their resolve to stick with Jesus through thick and thin.

Jesus takes the occasion to inculcate a lesson on power and authority on the two brothers and the other ten disciples who behave no better, getting jealous of the two. Power is shown by a person’s ability to stoop down and serve; the greatest among Jesus’ followers are those who forget their position so as to minister to the needs of all.

Mark gives his readers two pictures. On one side is the despotic Herod Antipas who makes his importance felt by living in a grandiose palace, taxing the people, and deciding the fate of this servants. On the other side is Jesus who mingles with the poor and the outcast, who pays taxes, and who is later brought to trial before the high priests and rulers.

The lines are clearly drawn. When the disciple aims for power and takes side with the oppressors, he betrays his master. When the disciple who has been given the power and authority in the community turns to be a proud despot, looking for influence, he destroys the Church, turning it merely into a sociopolitical organization.

When the Christian community allows itself to be blinded by the fascination of power and the strength of structure, it is no different from the pagans. It cannot be like that with Jesus’ disciples.

Paul describes “positions” as “charisms,” gifts of the Holy Spirit for the service of Christ’s body (cf 1 Cor 12:27-31). “Power” in the church comes from service, and this, in a sense, is not determined by “positions” or “offices.” St Augustine, reflecting on his position as a bishop, wrote: “What I am with you gives me joy, what I am for you frightens me. For with you, I am a Christian: for you I am a bishop. The former is grace, the latter is an office. The former is salvation, the latter is temptation.”
