FIFTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Go and Do Likewise

Jesus is acknowledged as “Rabbi” by his followers even if he has not attended any rabbinical school. A scholar who is learned in the law addresses Jesus as Teacher (rabbi), not out of belief or admiration but in order to test Jesus. And the Lord who can read the hearts of people obliges and takes this as an opportunity to teach.

The scholar’s question is one of the deep questions about life, as to how one can inherit eternal life. Jesus challenges him to draw an answer based on his knowledge of the law. The scholar gives a perfect answer by quoting from Deuteronomy about loving God from Leviticus about loving one’s neighbor as oneself.

“Do this and you will live,” Jesus tells the man. One is saved not simply because one can quote Scriptures. Knowledge and action on one’s knowledge are two different things. The matter of loving God and neighbor cannot be intellectualized. Jesus tells a parable to make it concrete.

The protagonist in the parable is a Samaritan; he is a religious and social outcast for the Jews who consider Samaritans a half-breed race, impure and heretical. The priest and the Levite represent the respectable members of society. Sadly, however, both the priest and the Levite fail to help the person lying on the road. They probably avoid getting involved, thinking that the whole scene may be a ploy and that robbers are waiting to pounce on them. Or they may think that the man lying on the road is dying or dead, and touching him will render them unclean for an entire week and unfit to perform the temple service.

Jesus raises the very pertinent question to the scholar: “Which of these three, in your opinion, was neighbor to the robbers’ victim?” The scholar admits, perhaps with great difficulty, that it is the Samaritan who proves to be a neighbor of the victim.

With Jesus, all become neighbors in the Kingdom of God: unlettered fishermen, greedy tax collectors, former prostitutes, the sick, and the poor. He teaches people to abolish all boundaries, end all divisions, and transcend all inherited prejudices by recognizing our common humanity.
