Fourth Sunday of Easter

The readings for the Fourth Sunday of Easter speak to some of the challenges faced by the earliest believers in Jesus as the crucified and resurrected Messiah.

In today's reading from Acts we hear some details of Paul's first mission to the Gentiles at Pisidian Antioch. In brief, the Jews rejected Paul and his co-worker Barnabas, but the Gentiles accepted them. Curiously, Paul viewed his evangelization of his fellow Jews as his first priority, and he also saw his Jewish opponents are integral to God's plan.

The second reading from the Revelation of John, part of the initial vision of heaven heard last Sunday, contains both the vision of the scroll and the lamb and the breaking of the seven seals. Today's second reading offers an enduring message of hope for Christians of all ages who suffer for their belief in the resurrected Christ.

The Gospel reading is actually a pre-Resurrection story from the Gospel of John and follows Jesus' Good Shepherd discourse. In today's reading, Jesus is engaged in a larger debate with some of the Jews who challenge him on his identity as the Messiah. Jesus rejects the criticism of his Jewish opponents on the grounds that they are unbelievers who do not "hear" his "voice." In the Gospel of John, those who believe are a gift given by the Father: "My Father ... has given them [believers] to me."

Please read the letter carefully and respond as generously as you can.
