Sixth Sunday of Easter

The readings for the Sixth Sunday of Easter discuss the role of the Holy Spirit in the life of the believing community.

The first reading from the Acts of the Apostles presents a portion of the debate that ensued at the Council of Jerusalem, likely dated to around AD 48, and decision (really compromise), which indicated that Gentile believers would not be required to follow Jewish practices and customs. Gentile believers were expected to abstain from meat offered to idols or meats from strangled animals, from blood, and from unlawful marriages. The apostles on both sides of the debate agreed that this was “the decision of the Holy Spirit.”

In the Gospel reading from John, we continue to hear from Jesus’ farewell discourse with the disciples. Jesus speaks of the Advocate, the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send to the disciples to “teach you everything and remind you of all that I told you.” Equally important, the Holy Spirit will bring a sense of peace to the believing community: “Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you.” The peace of Christ is the gift of the Holy Spirit. Jesus concludes his discussion of the Holy Spirit by reacting to the concern of the disciples: “Do not let your hearts be troubled or afraid.” Jesus, in fact, challenges them to “rejoice” that he is “going to the Father.” With the reunion of the Father and the Son, the Holy Spirit will arrive and be fully present to the church. In this way, the community of faithful will come to “believe” in the triune God.
