Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Today's readings teach us that serving others, fostering unity and our faith in Christ, is how we glorify God. Today's first reading comes from the last section of the book of Isaiah, which was compiled soon after the Israelites returned from exile in Babylon. Isaiah stressed that the Lord expects acts of charity that address the injustices of the day. In doing so, Isaiah taught, you become "light" to others.

In today's second reading, Paul draws on the image of Christ crucified as a source of unity among the Corinthians. As Paul tells us throughout his letters, the idea of a crucified Messiah was a "stumbling block" for many. Crucifixion was one of the most potent and crushing experiences of weakness and vulnerability in Roman society. But for Christians, both ancient and present, the life of Jesus did not end on the cross. In fact, it was the cross itself that juxtaposed the power of the Roman Empire with the power of God.

In today's Gospel reading, we hear Jesus challenge his disciples to be "salt of the earth" and "light of the world" to others. The metaphors of salt and light helped stress the importance of performing "good deeds." But for Jesus, acts of charity and compassion toward others are not ends in themselves. We are called to serve others—to be salt and light—so all will "glorify" God and foster unity in our community of faith.
