PRESIDENTS OF PROVIDENCE COLLEGE AND THE DIOCESE OF COLUMBUS CONNECTION

by Anthony J. Lisska

That the Dominican Fathers were pioneer missionaries in the part of Ohio which eventually became the Diocese of Columbus is certainly a well known historical fact. It is common knowledge that a Dominican Friar Preacher, Father Edward Dominic Fenwick, established the first permanent parish in the Diocese, St. Joseph near the Perry County town of Somerset. Furthermore, near Somerset for many years the Dominicans maintained a House of Studies for their students of Philosophy and Theology. There they also staffed a secular college which functioned briefly for a decade prior to the Civil War. In addition, the Dominican Fathers developed and operated Aquinas College High School in Columbus from 1905 until 1965. (1)

However, it is not commonly known what connections the Diocese of Columbus had with the Dominican priests who eventually assumed the presidency of Providence College in the capital city of Rhode Island. Founded in 1917, Providence College is the only college in the Western Hemisphere staffed and run by the Dominican Fathers.

The first president of Providence College was a Dominican priest who was raised and educated in Columbus. Father Dennis Albert Casey was born in Killorglin, County Kerry, Ireland on June 24, 1877, a son of Martin and Ellen (Russell) Casey. His family came to Columbus around 1884, when he was six or seven years old. Here his father was a railroad section hand and later a lamp lighter; they lived in several homes in succession, on Naghten street, Lavelle north of Naghten, Neil street (Neilston), and finally Eleventh street north of Groves. The future Father Casey thus grew up in the shadow of St. Patrick Church, which came under the care of the Dominican Fathers in August of 1885. "There he was educated in the parish school; he also attended Central High School in Columbus.

In addition to the normal Dominican education program at St. Rose Priory in Springfield, Kentucky and St. Joseph Priory near Somerset, Father Casey continued his education at the house of studies in Washington and at the University of Fribourg in Switzerland. He was ordained at St. Joseph Priory on August 2, 1903 by Rt. Rev. Henry Moeller, who was soon to complete his short tenure as Bishop of Columbus and become Archbishop of Cincinnati.

Following a brief stint at the house of studies in Washington, in 1912 Father Casey was named the third president of the Dominican institution in Columbus, which was then called Aquinas College. In 1916, Father Casey was reassigned to Providence, Rhode Island and assumed the position of founding president of Providence College; he served as president until 1921. Later in the 1920's he became prior of the Dominican house of studies in River Forest, Illinois, which was a magnificent priory built by the provincial at that time, Father Raymond Meagher. Following this assignment in River Forest, Father Casey entered parochial work, an apostolic duty he continued until 1938, when he was forced into semi-retirement by a cardiac condition. (2) He returned to his home parish of St. Patrick in Columbus, where he spent his remaining days. Father Casey died at St. Patrick's on March 20, 1940 and was interred in the Dominican community cemetery at St. Joseph's near Somerset. Father Casey is the only man to have served as president of both Aquinas College High School and Providence College.

The second president of Providence College, Father William Dominic Noon, was born on February 22, 1875 near Rehoboth in Perry County in the Diocese of Columbus, a son of Charles and Anastasia (Hammond) Noon. He was educated in the county schools prior to his entry into the Dominican Order. He studied at St. Joseph near Somerset and at St. Rose in Springfield, Kentucky. He continued his education at the historic Minerva College in Rome. Following his ordination (March 5, 1898) at the Basilica of the Most Holy Savior (St. John Lateran) in Rome, Father Noon taught in the House of Studies near Somerset and at Washington for eight years and then was assigned, along with Father John R. Volz, the first president of Aquinas College in Columbus, to teach at the University of Santo Tomas in Manila, The Philippines. He returned to Rome and received the degree of Master in Sacred Theology. He was president of Providence College for six years, from 1921 until 1927.

Following his tenure as president of Providence College, Father Noon was appointed to the Mission Band, in which capacity he preached throughout New England. For many years he was an assistant in the Dominican parishes of St. Dominic (Washington), St. Peter (Memphis), St. Albert (Minneapolis), and St. Pius V (Chicago). He spent the last years of his life among his brother priests, "a joyful and simple person awaiting the coming of his Lord." He had a marvelous sense of humor and always a funny story to tell. He died on July 4, 1952 and is buried in All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines, Illinois. (3)

The third and fourth presidents of Providence College, the well known scholar and educator, Father Lorenzo Cornelius McCarthy, and Father John Jordan Dillon, had little connection with the Diocese of Columbus other than studying at St. Joseph's near Somerset.

The next three presidents, Father Frederick Clement Foley, Father Robert Joseph Slavin, and Father Vincent Cyril More, all were alumni of Aquinas College High School in Columbus. Father Foley, although born in Lowell,
Massachusetts (in 1904) received his high school education at Aquinas, graduating in the class of 1923. He was ordained in Washington in 1932 after having studied in the House of Studies near Somerset. Following an appointment as Dean of the College at Providence, Father Foley served as president of the college from 1944 to 1947. Completing his tenure as president, he returned to Aquinas College High School, his alma mater, as an instructor of Freshman English. Father Foley died in 1955 while on the Aquinas faculty. He too was buried at St. Joseph near Somerset. Describing Father Foley, Professor Daniel J. O'Neill wrote, "The President was a man of warm friendship and comraderie." (4)

Father Robert Joseph Slavin, also a native of Massachusetts, was born in Dorchester (outside Boston) on March 19, 1907. Like Father Foley, Father Slavin studied in Columbus at Aquinas, graduating in the class of 1924. He was also educated at St. Joseph's near Somerset. He became president of Providence College in 1947 and served an illustrious career as college administrator until his early and untimely death in 1961. Father Slavin, a renowned philosopher, was one of the founding editors of The Thomist, a quarterly journal of philosophy and theology published by the American Dominicans. Before going to Providence, Father Slavin was a member of the faculty at the Catholic University in Washington. While a high school student at Aquinas, the later Father Slavin captured many academic honors. Describing his presidency at Providence, Professor O'Neill wrote that Father Slavin, a true renaissance person, "was a scholar, teacher, orator, philosopher and theologian of nationwide repute." (5)

The last president of Providence College to have a Columbus connection was Father Vincent Cyril Dore. Father Dore was born in New Haven, Connecticut on January 31, 1900 and like Father Slavin and Father Foley received his secondary education at Aquinas. Father Dore was a member of the class of 1919. He also studied at St. Joseph's near Somerset and the Catholic University in Washington. Following his ordination in 1928, his first assignment brought him back to Columbus as a member of the faculty of Aquinas. He served on the Aquinas faculty for two years, 1929-1931. During this time he also served as the swimming coach. Father Dore was reassigned to Providence College in 1931 and served many years there until his death in 1984. Following Father Slavin's death in 1961, Father Dore became president of the college and served in that capacity until 1965. He was then named chancellor of the Rhode Island Dominican Institution.

Historically, it is interesting that in the almost half-century period from 1916 until 1965, five of the first seven presidents of Providence College had rather direct connections with the Diocese of Columbus. The first two presidents were born or raised in this diocese, three of the five were graduates of Aquinas College High School within five years of each other, and three served on the Aquinas faculty, one as president. While students at Aquinas, they were members of the dormitory which was in existence for the Dominicans pre-ecclesiastical students. This dormitory functioned as a residence hall for Aquinas students until 1934, when it was closed in the depths of the Great Depression.

That a diocese in a relatively non-Catholic region of the United States should have a direct connection with five of the first seven presidents of the only First Order Dominican College in the Western Hemisphere is a fascinating historical fact.

Father Muns appears to have become affiliated with the Province of St. Albert when it was created from the Province of St. Joseph in 1939.
