January 19, 2020 Mystics in the Market Place The word “mystic” often conjures images of saints levitating at prayer, healing the sick, or talking to animals. Most people would not place themselves in that category. Yet, none of these experiences are basic to the reality of being a mystic. What is? A personal experience of God. As theologian Karl Rahner said, “The Christian of the future will be a mystic or will be nothing at all.” In this presentation, Mary Van Balen explores the meaning of “mystic” and ways to nurture the gift of experiencing God that are available to everyone. Mary is the author of four books, numerous articles, and for over 31 years has written the column, “Grace in the Moment” which appears in our Catholic Times.

January 26, 2020-February 23, 2020 5-week series on Lumen Fidei, the first encyclical of Pope Francis, issued on June 29, 2013, the Solemnity of Saints Peter and Paul, and published on July 5, 2013, less than four months after his election to the papacy. This encyclical was issued in conjunction with the Year of Faith proclaimed by Pope Benedict XVI. It was the first encyclical in the history of the Catholic Church written by two popes, begun by Pope Benedict XVI and finished by Pope Francis. Fidei is a work of some sixty paragraphs devoted to the fundamental religious question of our age: How are we to understand faith in a world which dismisses it as mere sentiment and, moreover, does not even understand the concept of universal truth? Mary Koors has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Theology from Ohio Dominican College and a Master of Arts in Theology from the Pontifical Josephinum Seminary. She has been an Adjunct Instructor in Theology at Ohio Dominican University for over 20 years currently teaching Old Testament.
