

FIRST SUNDAY OF ADVENT

It seemed so hard to believe that one greater than David would one day rule the throne.

Jeremiah had suffered through his years in the prophetic ministry with one wicked king after another,

Jeremiah had a choice to make. He could believe what things looked like or he could believe what God's word was assuring him.

The call to the life of faith begs this same choice of us all. God laid before Jeremiah the logic of faith, and we all do well to listen:

"If you can break My covenant with the day and My covenant with the night, so that there will not be day and night in their season, then My covenant may also be broken with David My servant"

We look at the laws of the universe concerning day and night and sun and moon as irrevocable.

That was just how irrevocable God's promise was concerning a coming king and concerning His intention to restore His people.

Are we willing to look at the sun and the moon as promises of God's faith-fulness to fulfill His word?

Are we willing to live risk-taking lives for Jesus?

Are we willing to live as Jeremiahs in this present world?

Are we willing to invest financially in the work of the kingdom?

Are we willing to look at the sun and the moon as promises of God's faith-fulness to fulfill His word?
