Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

“Rejoice with Jerusalem . . . Exult, exult with her” (Isaiah 66:10). God’s loving, maternal presence is mirrored in Jerusalem, as the prophet boldly proclaims in the first reading, moving from a restored Mother Jerusalem who nurses and comforts her people, to God who says: “as a mother comforts her child, so will I comfort you” (66:13). Similar joy is experienced by the seventy-two Jesus send out. He gives clear directives stressing the urgency of their mission: travel lightly—no money bag, no sack, no sandals, no chatter along the way. Settle into one household, wishing peace and making do with the accommodations offered. Don’t fuss over the food. Most of all, cure the sick and preach the Good News that God’s Kingdom is near. The result—joy! In the opening of The Joy of the Gospel, Pope Francis writes that our joy is continually reborn. With that, we are invited to begin a new chapter of evangelization, made distinct by this joy. Today’s readings trace this preaching task from Jesus to the Disciples, then to Paul, who clearly locates his joy in preaching Christ crucified, thereby ushering in a new creation. It’s our turn to witness to Christ.

How are you answering this call? Have you found joy in the call?
