“Nathan Laube whipped up a storm with Messiaen and Duruflé . . . but it was his traversal of Bach’s G minor Fantasia and Fugue in G, BWV 542, that cemented his artistry most permanently . . . He turned the extended fugue into a conversation, and his outstanding control over the pedals allowed the bass to be a full actor in the drama.”

— Time Out Chicago

“ . . . We went out into the night, grateful for a musician who at the tender age of 23 can play to this astounding standard, at the same time without a trace of shallowness or overwrought showmanship.”
