DO LENT, NOT PUSH- UPS

Each year Catholics face a bit of a question:

What am I supposed to do for Lent?

Do you give up chocolate? Do you give up sodas? Do you give up alcohol? Do you pray a little more? Do you go to daily mass? ... There is a sense in which these are all good things, but there is a definite temptation that can appear when preparing for Lent: It's easy to make Lent a sort of "Catholic New Year's Resolution."

Does this sound familiar?—It's a little too familiar of a temptation for me. A few years ago, I decided to "do Lent big." I gave up alcohol and desserts, and I increased my exercise, undertaking a sort of Lenten boot camp. But with the arrival of Easter, what was I prepared for?

Last year in contrast, my life was busy, so I kept it simple. Instead of the boot camp version of Lent, I just wrote a quick note of gratitude for each day. And here's the thing: I found myself a little more kind and a little more grateful for those around me.

There is a temptation within Lent to turn the experience into a sort of Catholic-self-help or a Catholic-dieting plan. It's easy to turn our attention towards the Lenten push-ups rather than the Lenten prayers. Yet, that misses the heart of the season.

During Lent, we are asked fast, give alms, and pray in order to prepare our communities and our hearts to encounter Christ within the mystery of the Resurrection—Lent seeks to form us to be more attuned to the little day-to-day resurrections which occur within our lives.

As we prepare to enter Lent, here are a few reflection questions to help you make your Lenten journey more about prayer than push-ups:

- How should I fast? What should I give up for Lent? Are there things in my life to which I'm holding on too tightly?
- How should I "give alms"? What should I give away for Lent?

In what ways do I need to grow in generosity and gratitude? How am I being called to share my gifts, graces, possessions, and myself with others?

- How should I pray in a special way? What can I do to pray and prepare for Easter?

Where does my relationship with God need more attention?
