From Father Mike

I feel that the people of this parish are generally hard working and trying our best to be loving people. But a better criteria to measure ourselves is not so much our personal productivity but how well we allow God to work through us to make His love more effective in the world. When Paul says to the Corinthians in today's second reading, "But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace to me has not been ineffective," we get a sense of how we too, like this great apostle, are who we are by God's grace and not our own activity. Better yet, Paul says this right after mentioning his persecution of the church, so he realized that God has made him effective even though he had been a failure in many ways. We can easily see ourselves as failures or otherwise not living up to some spiritual or moral standard, and often we do fall short. Nevertheless, the point of our lives is that being a follower of Jesus means to allow God's grace to use us for his Kingdom. When we focus on God's working through us more than our own efforts, we see indeed that his "grace...has not ineffective."
