Today is Trinity Sunday. It is our firm belief that our God is a relationship of harmony, love and peace and that we are created in this image. Boy, could we use more of that today. The world we live in today, as St. Paul says, needs some mending, don’t we? The tragic events we see unfolding on our televisions and social media platforms today testify that we have a long long way to go. The unnecessary and tragic death of George Floyd, the arson and torching of countless businesses and other acts of physical violence that has infiltrated peaceful protests in major cities around our nation is senseless, useless and backwards. Violence only begets more violence. Since over 400 years ago, we have been haunted by a past we struggle to escape. And until we can see one another as God sees us, we will wallow in our sins. Yes, we have made great progress throughout the years in striving for unity and we celebrate that, however, as we progress as a nation, we see at certain points of contention evidence that we are not there yet. As Christians, we are called upon by Jesus, himself, to be lights to the world and salt to the earth. That is both a pat on the back and a continuing challenge for us all to act differently than the world does. Love more deeply and reconcile without question.

Let us choose to be agents of peace,
