

Xaverian Scholarship Test

By Samantha Darconte and Isadora Gonzalez

This past Saturday was the HSPT test at Xaverian. It included five sections which were quantitative reasoning, reading, math, vocabulary, and language. The reading section consists of several short passages with questions for each of them and math was comprised of some 8th grade material. According to Cassidy Corey the test wasn't that hard, but the timing on some of the sections was difficult. As she explained, "The test was totally fine even though there were some questions that I had never seen before." Regarding its difficulty compared to the other high school tests she has taken, she found that it was harder than the TACHS test, but a little easier than the SHSAT. In total, the test was two and a half hours and had around 300 questions.

Good luck to everyone who took the test, we hope you get a scholarship!
