You’ve no doubt heard someone say: I’m spiritual, but not religious. It’s usually articulated by people who choose not to be affiliated with organized or institutional religion. This is a counter point to that statement by author and theologian Nick Wagner who works with catechists and religion teachers in parishes and schools.

Seven ways to be both spiritual and religious
I ran across an article recently titled “Seven Differences Between Spirituality and Religion.” From what I can tell from a Google search, the author is a young man who has survived a difficult life. I don’t want to criticize whatever strategies he’s used to hang onto a healthy, peaceful life. But I do want to use his article to hold a mirror up to ourselves. He deeply misunderstands what “religion” is about. We need to ask ourselves what we are doing that contributes to such misunderstandings. And what are we doing to communicate a true story of our faith? Here are his seven points.

1. Religion makes you bow — spirituality sets you free
Religion does both. Bowing is a sign of reverence, respect, and putting the other first. The author obviously means bowing in a way that indicates subjugation, as though we were slaves. We have to be better at conveying the radical freedom from any form of slavery that Jesus offers.

2. Religion shows you fear — spirituality shows you how to be brave
We know that Jesus puts an end to all fear and replaces it with a peace that passes understanding. But somehow we are not getting that message out there. Perhaps some of us grew up with an image of a fear-inducing God. The world certainly has that image. What are we doing to communicate Jesus’s promise of peace?

3. Religion tells you the truth — spirituality lets you discover it
This is a difficult point to challenge. Of course, Jesus is the truth, and it is our job to proclaim that truth. But humans are hard-wired to believe we are the truth. Or we know the truth. The church has certainly gotten things wrong in the past, and we will in the future. But on the whole, as a community, we get closer to the truth of Jesus than any one of us will on our own. How well are we acknowledging the imperfections of the church while at the same time proclaiming the truth of Jesus that is found within the church?

4. Religion separates from other religions — spirituality unites them
Over the course of history, we Catholics haven’t been very good at combating this idea. In fact, we’ve done a lot to give it credence. But that is one of the imperfections of our past, not the goal of our future. Pope Francis recently said: Many think differently, feel differently, seeking God or meeting God in different ways. In this crowd, in this range of religions, there is only one certainty that we have for all: we are all children of God.... We should not stop praying for and collaborating with those who think differently. The pope is giving us an example. We have to hold fast to our belief in Christ without denigrating and separating from other religions.

5. Religion makes you dependent — spirituality makes you independent
This one is 100% true, and I’m glad. Christianity is a community of brothers and sisters, all dependent upon one another. And as a body, we are dependent upon God. This is way better than being alone, isolated, and completely dependent upon myself. In the Western world however, “independence” has become a kind of secular religion. We have to inculturate ourselves into the lives of those who value independence and find gentle ways of sharing the greater value of community life.

6. Religion applies punishment — spirituality applies karma
I don’t really know what karma is. The author says it is the consequence of our actions. I don’t see how that is different from what the church teaches about sin and punishment. But I do see that the world thinks Christianity is focused on punishment. As Catholics we have to get way better at getting the message of unconditional love and mercy out there.

7. Religion makes you follow another’s journey — spirituality lets you create your own
It is true that we invite others to follow the way of Christ, but no one makes followers follow. Each of us is on our own journey. The fact that we choose to follow the way of Christ and we are on that journey with others does not make the journey any less our own. The challenge here is not knowing the truth. It is communicating that truth to others in a way that is liberating and not oppressive.
Teens and parents - check out the St. Perpetua website for the latest calendar update.

The weekly Teens@StPerpetua will start the first week in October. In the interim all of the registrations are being entered.

This week for Teens at St. Perpetua -

- Wednesday, September 26 - a look at the Bible and sharing reflections. Generally the last week of the month we will have a Bible Study group.
- Sunday, September 30 - Confirmation gathers at the 11:30 Teen/Family Youth Mass, and again at either 4:30 or 6:30pm in the Chapel in the upper lot.

Teens, remember that things don't always work out the way we want them to, or the way we think they will. Sometimes we don't even see it coming. We get hit with some form of pain out of nowhere leaving us feeling desperate and helpless. But that's the way life is. Still, it makes us wonder how God can let these things happen to us. How God can just stand by and watch us suffer. Where is God when it really hurts? Maybe God is actually closer to us than we think. Maybe it's when we're in these situations, where everything seems to be falling apart, that God gets an opportunity to remind us of how much He really loves us. Have a good week. Any questions, drop me a note at gguerrero@stperpetua.org and I will get back to you shortly.

Dear Wonderful Community of St. Perpetua Church,

Thank you for your continued support of our annual "Back-2-School" Backpack Drive! Your terrific donation of 27 new backpacks filled with school supplies helped to give many at risk and low income students in our community such a terrific sense of pride and enthusiasm for the challenges that each school year brings, as well as the tools needed for academic and personal success. Your generosity is truly appreciated by our underserved youth, who rarely have anything new, that they can call their own - such a great and unique feeling for all of them. With your assistance, we were able to distribute over 1,800 backpacks to students in our community. The entire team here at Monument Crisis Center sends you our Heartfelt thanks--you helped to make "Back-2-School 2018" happy for so many! "...Sandra Scherer, Executive Director”

Twenty-fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time

It was even more dangerous to be a child in the ancient world than it is today. The infant mortality rate was huge, and if you made it to your first birthday you still had to survive the many calamities that still plague children today. Think back on your own childhood. What accidents or illnesses might have proved fatal without modern medicine? In times of food scarcity children were the last to be fed—first the boys, and, finally, the girls. In some Middle Eastern cultures, children were sacrificed to the gods in order to ensure good harvests, and rain. That little child whom Jesus called over had already beaten the odds a million times.

It was the very low economic and social status of children that Jesus was pointing out to his disciples. Here’s this child, he seems to say. Take a good look. When you serve a child, you serve me. That must have been incomprehensible to those who had followed Jesus for hundreds of miles, in deserts and on lakes, because of his great charisma and warmth. He had much higher status than a child, didn’t he?

If you’re like me, I’ll bet your friends are popular, attractive, accomplished. As I survey my own “contacts,” I have to honestly admit that I don’t have any friends who have severe mental challenges. I don’t have any friends who are in prison, or who live on the street.

It’s not that I haven’t had the time to make these friends. I somehow found the time, after all, to cultivate the friends I have. Notice the ones you never notice, says Jesus. There I am, in the midst of them.

Who is the person you’ve been trying not to notice?

The Oakland Catholic Worker is a transitional shelter and accompaniment program for migrant Latin American families. Rooted in the nearly seventy-year presence of Catholic Worker communities in Oakland initiated by Br. Antonius (1950’s) and renewed by Anne Symens (early 1980’s), the current ministry of the Oakland Catholic Worker has existed since 1986 co-founded by Bob Lassalle and Francisco Herrera. Besides offering temporary lodging and meals, we provide psychological, emotional, spiritual and moral support for our guests. We link them to resources that offer more permanent housing, legal and social services and employment opportunities. We offer our guests and neighbors ESL classes to help them adjust to their new lives in the United States.

We also serve our East Oakland neighborhood by offering hot food each Monday and Wednesday from 11:00 to 2:00 p.m. to anyone who comes to our door. We host a neighborhood grocery distribution each Thursday for over 300 families in need. In the Catholic Worker tradition we also advocate and promote changes to institutional structures which unjustly deprive our immigrant populations of basic human rights as inspired and outlined in Catholic social doctrine. Finally, we host regular bi-lingual liturgical, para-liturgical and cultural events.
