10th Sunday in Ordinary Time

The readings are extraordinarily rich in their content as we return to Ordinary Time. We are reminded of how quick the devil can lead us to blame others for our sins, as Adam blamed Eve, and Eve blamed the serpent. The Gospel shows that which is divided cannot stand. It is the same for us as Catholics today. We must stand united in the truth and beauty of our faith and share that faith with others. Fewer things are more detrimental to our cause of evangelization than interior division within. We must put aside all quarreling, bitterness, envy, and hatred for one another and instead be quick to listen, slow to speak, and slow to anger in dealing with our brothers and sisters. Let that be our message for today: seek unity in the truth and do not fight your own brothers and sisters in Christ. When a non-Catholic sees Catholics arguing and fighting with other Catholics, why would that non-Catholic want to become Catholic? Archstl.org/dynamic
