

Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time, July 7, 2019

Jesus said, "Whatever town you enter and they do not receive you; go out into the streets and say, the dust of your town that clings to our feet, even that we shake off against you. Yet know this: The Kingdom of God is at hand." —Lk 10:1-20

It is there, in the family setting, that Vincentians listen, offer humble advice, and render assistance. Know that the members of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul bring your gift directly to the poor and suffering in our Parish.

Sacred Stories By Judith Dunlap

The Bible is a library of books: poetry, wise sayings, history, letters and stories. All of the books have one thing in common. They all relate to God, who was very much active in the lives of His people. I like the stories best because I get to read about ordinary men and women as well as great kings and queens who had problems just like me. I get to see how their response brought them closer to or further away from God. Reading their sacred stories helps me when I reflect on my own story.

Each of us has a story. The weeks, months and years of our life turn into the chapters of our story. Few of us reach adulthood without experiencing enough comedy and tragedy to fill our own “sacred” book. What a shame if we never take the time to sit back, and “re-read” these pages that continue to shape our future.

The great philosopher Socrates said, “The unexamined life is not worth living.” That’s a rather dramatic way of saying that life is short, and if you don’t stop once in a while to reflect on it, it will pass you right by. How can we grow as persons unless we look back and learn from our past? How can we grow as Christians if we don’t look back on our lives with the eyes of faith to see where we have been and where we need to be?

Take time for theological reflection. Ask yourself where God was in the various chapters in your life. Take time to sit with your children and grandchildren and reminisce. Help them see you as the child you once were with your own fears and failings. Share your stories and your wisdom with them. Listen to their stories and teach them the life skill of reflecting on their own lives and seeing them as “sacred” stories, too. For Family Response: Ask family members to talk about their favorite birthday. Include as many details as possible. End with a prayer thanking God for the people and things that made that birthday special.
