THE PASTOR'S PEN

Dear Parish Family,

One of Pope Benedict's favorite explanations of God's existence is the analogy of electricity. No one actually sees electricity, he explains, but we do see its effects, and so we know it exists - the light bulb goes on, the vacuum cleaner goes on, the alarm clock goes off. Just so, no one actually sees God directly, face to face, but we do see the works of God - the Church, the saints, and, of course, the beautiful, amazing world around us.

The Psalm we just heard expresses the sense of wonder that we have all experienced at one time or another in the face of the beauty of creation. Sometimes we are so awed by the magnificence of a sunset, or a moonrise, or an ocean view, that it almost overwhelms us. That's the experience the psalmist is describing: "When I see your heavens, the work of your fingers, the moon and stars that you set in place... What is man that you are mindful of him?"

The same sentiment comes out in the First Reading from the Book of Proverbs. In this famous passage from Chapter 8, the Wisdom of God is personified, and describes himself as pre-existing all the mysterious wonders of the visible world: the mountains and hills, the oceans and skies, the very foundations of the earth... Before all these things came into existence, God's wisdom was already at work. The point the Proverb is making is that all those wonderful, beautiful things, as impressive as they are, are only a dim reflection of the wonder and beauty of God who made them. Today as the Church turns our attention towards the inner nature of God himself, the blessed Trinity, she does so by turning our attention to the Trinity's glorious work of art: creation.

QUO VADIS

Marcus Vinicius, commander of Rome's 14th Legion, is in love with Lygia, a member of the Christian sect accused of undermining Roman values dictated by the all-powerful Nero. The destinies of these three and of the Empire play out in a tale whose visual highlights include the parade of triumphant legions, the burning of Rome and the martyrdom of Christians before cheering, bread-and-circus throngs.
