One of God's main policies in governing the universe is that he always gives us another chance. It may seem strange to speak of God as having policies. But if a policy is a consistent way of behaving in the face of specific circumstances, God's habit of giving us another chance definitely qualifies. This is what the prophet Isaiah tells us.

Through him, God explains: "Remember not the events of the past... see, I am doing something new!" God is inviting his people to look to the future with hope.

At the time Isaiah was writing, the people of Israel were living in exile, as second-class citizens in Babylon. They had been unfaithful to God, and as a result, Jerusalem had long ago been conquered and its inhabitants scattered and enslaved. Naturally speaking, there was little room for hope.

But in the midst of that situation, God reminds them that he has done wonders for his people in the past, and promises to do so again. It's God's policy to give his people another chance, to bring them back from exile even though they don't really deserve it. Jesus follows the same policy with the adulterous woman.

Notice that he doesn't ignore or excuse her sin - he acknowledges it and actually tells her to "go and sin no more." But at the same time, he doesn't condemn her. He gives her another chance. It's a good thing God follows this policy. Otherwise, which one of us could have any hope? Otherwise, God would have to destroy us all. After all, aren't we just like the Pharisees - quick to condemn others, but in truth, guilty of hidden sin ourselves?
