The month of September is dedicated to the Seven Sorrows of Mary. Devotion to the sorrows of the Virgin Mary dates from the twelfth century, when it made its appearance in monastic circles under the influence of St. Anselm and St. Bernard.

Porn Impacts Children
 Reality: many boys and girls are looking at porn

Porn used to be hard to come by for young people. Kids would have to stumble on a parents or uncles "stash" of magazines or videocassettes (or get it from another child who did). Today, this is not the case. The Internet has made sexual content available in nearly every home – and to any age. According to a survey of today's college students, more than half of men and 1/3 of women say they first saw pornography before their teenage years.

It isn't just boys, either. If there ever was a time in our culture when porn was an exclusively male habit, that time is long gone. While it is still generally true that girls are less likely to seek pornography, about 1/4 of young girls, on at least one occasion, will spend 30 consecutive minutes or more viewing pornography online.

In adulthood, 20 – 30% of women become regular consumers of pornography or participants in sexually explicit chat rooms. And girls are actually more likely than boys to become someone else's pornography by sending nude or seminude pictures or videos of themselves online.

Is it any wonder that when a child or adolescent is directly exposed to pornography, the following effects have been documented?

- ◆ having sexual intercourse early
- ◆ lasting negative and traumatic emotional responses to seeing porn
- ◆ the belief that the best sexual satisfaction is attained without having affection for one's partner
- ◆ the belief that being married or having a family are unattractive prospects
- ◆ an increased risk of developing sexual compulsions and addictive behavior

If a child is exposed over and over to incorrect information about human sexuality, long before he or she is able to understand this information, the result could be a lifetime of hurt. These facts are not presented here just to be shocking, but rather to bring us to a healthy dose of reality. One of the most powerful tools we have when it comes to teaching the children about the beauty of their sexuality in the digital age is conversation. Real, honest, "look them in the eyes" conversations about their deep questions. In the digital age, passive parenting is not an option – the Internet never rests. Parents must engage actively with their children on the deep questions of their hearts even if it is awkward for them and/or you. It's important. The constant flood of influence that comes through the Internet and social media in all its various forms along with social pressures from peers and their poor choices make it difficult for a child of God to live a virtuous life. And, regrettably, all of this, including Internet pornography, is teaching our children how and what to think about sex and marriage. Again, in the digital age, it's not or is not a matter of if your child will see something inappropriate online. It's only a matter of when. Regrettably, at least once a month, 49% of teens stumble across porn. One exposure can create a lifetime of viewing and struggling.

As parents the time to act is now. As awkward as talking to our kids about porn is, the cost of not talking about it is too high. Sex is a God-given gift, and we do not want our children to see it cheapened by pornography
