There's a Texas saying, "When you boil the pot dry," meant to refer to what's left after all else goes away. For example, "When you boil the pot dry, it was a misunderstanding that caused all the fuss." It's akin to getting to the gist of the matter, without superfluous details. "What's the bottom line?" is another expression that captures the sentiment.

In Jesus' day- when over 600 particular laws made up the totality of Mosaic Law, and a violation of one effectively meant a violation of the totality—the question posed to Jesus is seen as reasonable. Moreover, in the context of the larger story, Jesus had bested the chief priests, elders, disciples of the Pharisees, the Herodians, and the Sadducees; and now the Pharisees themselves are ready to take another turn. One of their number, a scholar of the law, becomes their mouthpiece. We should keep in mind that though the question seems perfectly legitimate on its face, the scholar was asking Jesus in order to test him. That test doesn't seem to bother Jesus, who responds by quoting Mosaic Law, first Deuteronomy 6:5 followed by Leviticus 19:18. It's quite likely that Jesus himself was the first to combine these two commandments. For him, and for his disciples, these two commandments are the foundation of the law and the prophets. It's what we have when we boil the pot dry. It's the bottom line. When we love God and love our neighbor, we are fulfilling the law. All of the law, the entirety of the more than 600 particular laws, are summed up in these two. For us today, we might think of something similar if one were to ask which is the most important teaching in the catechism, or which is the most important precept of the church. Perhaps a comparable question might be whether it is more important to tend to a sick relative or attend Mass? The answer sidesteps all these questions by saying the most important law is twofold: Love God and love your neighbor. With these as our guiding light, all else comes into focus.
