Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and they shall name him Emmanuel.

Prepare the Way for Christ: Advent, Christmas and the New Evangelization

Each year the Church gives us a season of Advent to help us prepare spiritually for Christ’s coming. Advent is one of our favorite seasons of the year. It is also one of the most challenging. For Catholics, the focus of this season looks beyond the busyness of shopping, putting up decorations and making the rounds of parties. While our lives do tend to get busier than ever during this time of year, the true spirit of Advent invites us to slow down, to become reflective, and to tap into that deepest longing of our hearts which only the coming of Christ can fully satisfy.

In contrast to the instant communication and gratification of our digital culture, Advent invites us to slow down and to wait. We await Christ’s coming into our world. To keep Advent well requires a deliberate effort on our part. It calls us to be counter-cultural in some small but important ways. It calls us to recognize that our salvation is not something we can produce or purchase or download, but something that is given by God. It must be received in faith.

In a few days we will celebrate the joyful feast of Jesus’ birth. At Christmas we welcome Christ-Savior by offering him a worthy dwelling place in our hearts and homes. But as Christians we not only welcome him into our hearts, we are also called to bring him to the world. Faith in Jesus Christ is a gift to be received and shared. Our faith is not merely a private refuge. Indeed, faith brings a profoundly personal experience of God’s love, healing and direction to our lives. But the Gospel has social and public implications as well. Jesus came to save the world from sin and hopelessness and to inaugurate his Kingdom of justice, love and truth. His Gospel proclaims liberty for captives, sight for the blind. His coming is good news and it is intended for all. Each of us has a personal role in bringing the Gospel, the joyful news of Christ’s coming and of his saving death and resurrection, to the world in which we live. Each of us are called to be evangelizers.

Like his immediate predecessors, Pope Benedict XVI has called the whole Church to a renewed commitment to evangelization. To give support to this urgent task of the whole Church, the Holy Father will convene in 2012 a synod of bishops to address the challenges of the New Evangelization. The special focus of this latest evangelizing effort in the long history of the Church’s mission, while not excluding those who have never heard the Gospel, will focus on re-evangelizing those parts of the world where faith has grown cold. Its focus will be especially on the secularized culture that has excluded God, marginalized and privatized faith, or rejected God outright. This is the culture in which we live.

Just as the pagan culture into which Jesus sent the Apostles almost 2,000 years ago often dismissed the Gospel as foolishness, and just as his own people often found it a stumbling block, so our culture presents considerable obstacles for those who undertake its re-evangelization. The thing that we must bear in mind, however, is that the ultimate success of every effort at evangelization does not depend ultimately on the one who sows the seed, or even on the quality of the soil where the seed is sown, but on the inherent power of the seed itself, that is, the Word of God. It is God who produces the harvest. God uses our voice and our testimony, but it is God who brings forth the fruit.

For those who are willing and eager to take on the challenge of the New Evangelization, what is most necessary is a firm faith in the truth of the message they proclaim and in the One who guarantees its truth and power. Jesus guarantees the triumph of the Kingdom, which though sown like a tiny mustard seed, will ultimately become a great tree in which all creatures will find refuge.

Composer Finds Faith, Passion in Liturgical Music

By Traci Chapman
For the Sooner Catholic

NORMAN — For Lisa Stafford, music has been a lifelong passion.

“Music expresses who she is, her love for her family and her faith, she said. Through her compositions, she said she hoped to help others find and express ‘sacred truths.’

“I wrote a Mass of Grace setting — we’re using it here with the new translation,” Stafford said recently. “It’s mainly for people to learn the New Mass.

Her new composition is far from her first. Stafford said she first discovered music listening to her grandfather play the piano. In seventh grade, she began piano lessons, and her passion took flight, she said:

“I’ve composed off and on all my life, and I’ve performed in music theater, been in choirs and sung all of that time too,” Stafford said. “I got serious about composing about 15 years ago.”

Her dedication has paid off. About 20 of Stafford’s compositions have been published, most of them sacred music. During that time, she served as music director, formed a children’s choir, been the cantor and sung in the choir at St. Joseph’s Church in Norman, where she has been a member for about 30 years, she said. In 2002, Stafford said she stepped down as music director and away from her children’s choir duties.

“I wanted to have more time to compose and to explore music,” she said.

With her compositions, Stafford said she hoped to enhance each person’s sacred experience.

“I think the Mass should really have a sense of the sacred space,” she said. “When I write, I try to be very conscious of the sacred space.

“Good music can nourish the liturgy or it can detract from it — it should almost be transparent,” Stafford said.

While sacred music is her “heart and soul,” Stafford said her tastes run from classic Gregorian chants and complex compositions to indie rock bands.

“I hear all of it in our family,” she said.

Stafford met her husband, Doug, while working toward a bachelor’s degree in musical arts at the University of Oklahoma. Doug Stafford is part of a bluegrass band, while son, Paul, is a costume designer and makeup artist. Son, Michael, recently attended Boston Conservatory, studying clarinet, and daughter, Rebekah, writes music and plays guitar and bass, Stafford said.

“We all have our different tastes, but I think we all like the kind of music that makes you think,” Stafford said. “That’s certainly how I work with my compositions — they’re a marriage of words and music, and it should flow.

“Hopefully when other people hear it, that’s what they think,” she said.

Sanctity of Life Mass Set for Jan. 18 at Cathedral
Speakers to Address Youth, Adults

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Sanctity of Life Mass will be held at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 18 at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, 3214 N. Greg Schleppenbach, Nebraska Catholic Conference State Director of Pro Life Activities, will present “Proclaiming the Gospel of Life in a Culture of Death” for adults in the Cathedral. Rev. Joseph Irwin of St. Francis Xavier Church, Enid, will facilitate the discussion for teens, in the Cinema Center located next to the Cathedral.

On Thursday, Jan. 19, Schleppenbach will repeat the presentation at 11:30 a.m. at Catholic Charities, 1501 N. Classen Blvd., for those unable to attend the previous evening. Lunch will be provided. Archdiocese to Celebrate MLK

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Archdiocese annual celebration to honor the work of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will be held on Sunday, Jan. 15 at noon at Corpus Christi Church. Mass will be celebrated by the Most Reverend Paul Coakley, Archbishop of Oklahoma City.

A Multicultural Tribute will follow Mass at 12:15 p.m. The tribute will include liturgical dances performed by St. Gregory’s University students, Corpus Christi youth, and dancers representing Guatemala, Puerto Rico and Mexico. A presentation of the “I Have a Dream” speech by Dr. King will be given by Mount St. Mary students.

The event, which is organized each year by Corpus Christi Parish and Catholic Charities, celebrates Dr. King’s work and invites the community to join in solidarity with those who are in need, and working for ways to improve their lives,” said Becky VanPool, director of Catholic Charities Parish Outreach and Program Development.

“Dr. King challenged society to ‘lift the load of poverty’, and we are challenged to pray and work for all those who are poor and marginalized,” VanPool said. “By improving their lives, we improve our lives as well.

“This Mass and the celebration are a tribute from the Catholic community. Everyone is invited to attend.”

Parishes Win Food Grants

The trustees of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation have awarded $23,975 in grants to 61 churches that provide meals to homebound elderly through Mobile Meals of Oklahoma County. In addition to helping offset the cost of food and transportation, the grants will help provide non-perishable meals for the seniors during inclement weather.

Among those receiving grants were six Catholic Churches in the Oklahoma City area.

Carolyn Roslick, Mobile Meals project coordinator, says that during the winter months there are often days when Mobile Meals providers are not able to deliver warm meals due to severe weather. “Thanks to these grants, we will be able to provide each senior with two non-perishable meals in early December so they will have food available in case of bad weather,” Roslick said.

“It really fulfills a need in the community.”

Mobile Meals of Oklahoma County serves nearly 1,100 seniors annually, and in 2010 delivered 143,695 meals throughout Oklahoma County. The 61 churches receiving the grants provide anywhere from one to five meals each week per recipient. The grant amounts range from $200 to $1,000 based on the number of meals provided by each site.

“Mobile Meals is a vital service for homebound elderly in our community, and we truly appreciate the commitment from these churches and their congregations to support the program,” says Nancy R. Anthony, executive director of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation.

This is the fourth consecutive year the Oklahoma City Community Foundation has awarded grants to Mobile Meals of Oklahoma County. Grants were awarded to the following Catholic churches in Oklahoma County that participate in the Mobile Meals program:

- Epiphany of the Lord
- Our Lady of Fatima Church
- St. Charles Borromeo Church
- St. Eugene Church
- St. Francis of Assisi Church
- St. Paul the Apostle Church

Students Work as Santa’s Helpers for Make-A-Wish

OKLAHOMA CITY — When Mount St. Mary Catholic High School art teacher Kathleen Blake got her students started on the Make-A-Wish Believe “Letter to Santa” project, she had an idea much bigger then Santa Claus in mind.

Mount art students raised more than $400 for the Macy’s Make-A-Wish Foundation by rallying fellow Rocket students and MSM faculty to write a letter to Santa Claus. Art students organized the effort and for each letter to Santa Claus mailed from Mount St. Mary, Macy’s donated $1. Together, Mount St. Mary donated over $400 to the Make-A-Wish Foundation!

Blake’s relationship with the Make-A-Wish Foundation began when a friend’s child was diagnosed with a rare form of cancer. In the last few years of the child’s life, Blake and her community did everything they could to make a difference in the life of that young child, and the Make-A-Wish Foundation was instrumental in that effort. Make-A-Wish made the child’s biggest wish come true — a trip to Disney World for the entire family.

“My goal for the Santa letter project was to bring our Mount community together to raise money for a foundation that makes huge differences in the lives of those in need. But I also hope that while writing the letters to Santa Claus, our students took a minute to pause and reflect on what the holidays are all about — their faith and serving others,” she said.

Mount St. Mary Catholic High School would like to wish you a Merry Christmas. May all of your wishes come true, may you take a moment to reflect on the gifts in your life and may you do something to give back to others this Christmas season.

Mount Creates ‘Magic’ With Successful Fundraising Event

OKLAHOMA CITY — Over 350 Mount family members and friends attended this year’s Magic at The Mount held at the historic Oklahoma City Farmers Market. The event was highlighted by silent and live auctions, with items such as a catered dinner with Archbishop Coakley, an evening with Coach Barry Switzer and several getaways, including an exclusive South Beach condo, along with condos in Naples and Navarre Beach, Fl., and Outer Banks, N.C.

A Dutch Auction was held to continue building the perimeter fence around The Mount’s campus. Last year, Mount families stepped up to the challenge of surrounding the school’s new student parking lot with classic brick columns and ornamental wrought iron fencing. This year, constituents were invited to purchase columns and fencing that would extend the project from the southeast corner of the student parking lot, east to Shartel, then north to the front of the school building. Eighteen columns were sold along with many fence panels connecting the columns.

“My personal highlight of the evening was witnessing the incredible commitment to continue our fence project. This project is adding a world-class look to our already beautiful campus,” said Chris Stiles, director of Advancement.

The event raised more than $162,000. These funds are designated to the fence as well as assisting with the renovation of the school’s science labs, renovating gymnasium restrooms and enhancing campus security.

“In our 13 years of hosting this event, this year’s auction was by far the most enjoyable and profitable. The atmosphere inside the Farmers Market was electric. I am so grateful to our Mount friends and families who continue to amaze me by their generosity of supporting our school’s mission,” said Principal Talita DeNegri.

A special thank you to all of the school’s corporate partners who helped sponsor this event. These partnerships include 18002SellHomes, Affiliated Movers, Architectural Design Group, BancFirst, Chris and Ursula Bolding, CareSource, Durham Supply, Farm Bureau Insurance - Mark Wolf, Ferguson Buick GMC, Inc., Forest Building Materials, Grace Living Centers, Mac and Joan Maguire, Krapf Reynolds Construction, Macquarie Construction Company, Maguire-O’Hara Construction, Inc., Matt and Janis Mollman, Mercy Health Center, Michael Brooks-Jimenez Attorney at Law, Mollman Colligan Water, Nash Construction Company, Oklahoma Center for Orthopedics and Sports, Oklahoma Oil and Gas Management, Sisters of Mercy ORC Convent, Sisters of Mercy South Central Community, Smith Robert Baldischwiler, Stillwater National Bank, Tyler Media and Ward & Glass, LLP.

Catholics Celebrate Our Lady

Hispanic Catholics across the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City celebrated The Feast Day of Our Lady of Guadalupe on Dec. 12. Several parishes, including Sacred Heart of El Reno pictured here, saw hundreds of people join in the colorful celebration and Mass. The character pictured in the scary-looking mask represents Satan, who Father Mark Mason said “is always trying to throw us off balance.”

In December of 1531, the Blessed Mother appeared before a poor Aztec Indian by the name of Juan Diego. The apparition of Our Lady outside Mexico City before Juan Diego is credited with leading to the conversion of Mexico. In 2002, Pope John Paul II declared Juan Diego a saint.
Eucharistic Adoration Around the Archdiocese

Hail and blessed be the hour and moment in which the Son of God was born of the most pure Virgin Mary, at midnight in Bethlehem, in piercing cold. In that hour, vouchsafe, O God! to hear our prayers and grant our desires, through the merits of Our Savior Jesus Christ and of his Blessed Mother. Amen.

Pope Says Keep Focus on Christ This Christmas

By David Kerr
Catholic News Agency

Vatican City (CNA/EWTN News) — Pope Benedict XVI reminded Christians not to be dazzled by the shopping lights of the season, but to keep focused on the coming of Jesus Christ, the “true light of the world.”

“The external environment offers the usual commercial messages, even if in a less-sober way because of the economic crisis,” said the Pope during his Sunday Angelus address in a rain-soaked St. Peter’s Square Dec. 11. The Christian, by contrast, is “called to live Advent without being distracted by the lights.”

Christians should keep their eyes fixed on Christ so that “if, in fact, we persevere ‘vigilant in prayer and rejoicing in praise,’ our eyes will be able to recognize in him the true light of the world that comes to enlighten our darkness.”

Tens of thousands of pilgrims were at St. Peter’s Square for the third Sunday of Advent, known as Gaudete Sunday. The title is taken from St. Paul’s encouragement in the day’s reading: “Gaudete in Domino Semper,” meaning “Rejoice always in the Lord.”

The Pope paraphrased the famous words of the Fourth and Fifth century Bishop St. Augustine of Hippo. He noted that St. Augustine searched elsewhere in vain for truth, peace and joy before concluding that “the heart of man is restless, and cannot find peace and serenity until it rests in God.”

Therefore, true joy is not a “passing mood” nor “something that can be reached through its own efforts.” Instead, it is a gift “born from the encounter with the living person of Jesus.”

“In this season of Advent,” the Pope continued, “we strengthen our certainty that the Lord came among us and continually renews his consoling presence of love and joy.”

God is closer to us than we are to ourselves,” he added, citing St. Augustine’s description of God as “more inward than my innermost and higher than my uppermost.”

After praying the Angelus with pilgrims, the Pope turned his thoughts and words to the thousands of families who had gathered at St. Peter’s Square for the traditional blessing of the “bambinelli,” the little statues of the baby Jesus that will take pride of place in family cribs.

“Dear children,” said the Pope, “when you pray in front of your nativity scene, remember me as well, as I remember you. Thank you and Merry Christmas!”

In response, the children cheered and released balloons and paper lanterns into the air in celebration.

Parishes Offer Catholics Returning Home Program

Did you know that one out of every 10 Americans is an “ex-Catholic”? If they were a separate denomination they would be the third largest denomination in the United States, after Catholics and Baptists (Pew Research Center). In February, 11, three parishes in the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City (St. John the Baptist, The Epiphany of Our Lord and Christ the King) began zero’s new program that invites non-practicing Catholics back to the Church.

They have chosen Catholics Returning Home (CRH), a six-week series of compassion and reconciliation. The program is confidential, non-judgmental, and is facilitated by lay Catholics who have previously “returned home” and are eager to share their stories.

The sessions will include stories of returning Catholics, an overview of the church today, a walk-through of the Mass, an explanation of Reconciliation, and a discussion of the Creed in addition to ample opportunities to ask questions. Please help our parishes to reach out to inactive Catholics by praying for them, for the Holy Spirit’s guidance, and for the success of the Catholics Returning Home programs beginning in January.

Christmas is a time when inactive Catholics often return to the church for a Mass or celebration. During the upcoming holiday and Holy Day Seasons, we can warmly greet others as we are coming into and leaving church. We can go out of our way to notice visitors and newcomers seated near us and greet them at the “sign of pears.” And if the parking lot and church are overflowing, we can turn our complaining into rejoicing.

The Catholics Returning Home programs will be hosted at the following parishes:

Tuesdays beginning Jan. 10 from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.
St. John the Baptist Catholic Church: Dale and Connie Moore, 834-0765
Church of the Epiphany of the Lord: 722-2110 Ext. 125

Wednesdays beginning Jan. 11 from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.
Christ the King Church: 496-0033
Children Thrive With Unconditional Parental Love

Once I met a woman who had worked for years in fashion and modeling. Unsurprisingly, she was strikingly attractive. She was accompanied by her teenage daughter who, by contrast, was rather unremarkable to look at, maybe even a plain-Jane. After spending time with them, I began to sense that the mother, whose life had largely revolved around her appearance, seemed to look down on her daughter, perhaps unconsciously, because of her average appearance. Her daughter appeared to be aware of this lack of maternal acceptance, and seemed troubled and uncomfortable as she tried to compensate and please her mom in other ways.

The girl's situation was a strong reminder to me of how important it is for every child to experience unconditional acceptance from their parents if they are to grow and mature in a healthy way. Unconditional love profoundly and beautifully molds us as human beings.

A growing number of parents in our society, however, no longer seem to hold to this key notion of unconditionally accepting their own children. If parents are told by doctors that their children might be born with physical or mental disabilities, many parents today will reject them and even yield to the temptation to end their lives through direct abortion.

I was recently discussing the Special Olympics with the father of a boy who has Down syndrome, and he remarked that when he takes his son to the local chapter, there seem to be reduced numbers of new children participating each year. He wondered if this could be due to the expanded targeting of Down syndrome children through prenatal testing and abortion.

Most unborn children diagnosed with Down syndrome, in fact, are never allowed to be born. Data from the United Kingdom indicate that between 1989 and 2006 approximately 92 percent of women choose to terminate a pregnancy with a prenatal diagnosis of Down syndrome, while in the U.S., several published studies suggest the figure may be somewhere between 87 percent and 98 percent. A great many Down syndrome children, indeed, never see the light of day.

In the face of these harsh data, the importance of explicitly repudiating the eugenic mind-set that has taken hold in our society cannot be overstated. No child is perfect, but every child is precious. We need to act as a people “set apart” in our attitude to the begetting of children who may be disabled.

Historically, Catholics have always stood apart in this way. Practically, this means overturning our culturally-conditioned attitudes toward “imperfect” children, and accepting every child without preconditions. We must push back against the almost ubiquitous pressure that counsels us to ensure that our children are born without defects.

Bishop Leo Gormally argues it this way: “In part, these pressures are the natural temptation to avoid the burdens of care for the handicapped... in part, however, they are the pressures of cultural attitudes, assimilated by many Christians, toward the child.”

He continues: “For many it has become merely prudent to think of each child as a unique gift of God; children are more like planned acquisitions in our culture, acquisitions which should fit into our expectations about how our lives should go, about the ease and enjoyments that should characterize our lifestyle. A child who might threaten our ease may, if he or she is viewed as an acquisition, be thought of as a replaceable acquisition. And indeed genetic counselors will tell parents: You can terminate this pregnancy and try again for a ‘normal child.’”

A husband and wife are called to give themselves to each other completely and unreservedly, and to accept each other unconditionally in the marital embrace. Every child of theirs, whether entering the world with a handicap or not, is an expression and fruit of themselves and their acceptance of each other. To reject their own progeny because of a disability is to reject each other on some level. To deny life to their own flesh and blood is also to reject an infinite gift from the Giver of gifts, and to arrogate to themselves a ruthless power over life. Meanwhile, the unconditional acceptance of a child as a gift of God flows from the true and unconditional acceptances of each other as husband and wife, even with all their emotional faults and defects.

As Gormally concludes, “Truly unreserved self-giving carries with it a commitment to unreserved acceptance of the fruit of that self-giving. The dignity of the child is only adequately recognized in the acceptance and cherishing of him just as he is.”

We do well continually to realign our thinking, so we can come to see how our children, whether “perfect” or not, are treasures and never possessions; they are gifts, and never acquisitions. They are blessings to be safeguarded and nurtured in the embrace of unconditional parental acceptance.

The Policies and Politics of Pope Pius XII: Between Diplomacy and Morality

Does Dr. Frank J. Coppa, a history professor at St. John’s University and author of previous books on the history of the papacy, provide anything new to the discussion of Pope Pius XII’s supposed silence during World War II? I think so.

Does Dr. Frank J. Coppa, a history professor at St. John’s University and author of previous books on the history of the papacy, provide anything new to the discussion of Pope Pius XII’s supposed silence during World War II? I think so.

For example, Pius XII did not remain silent, as some claim. He was, in fact, the most active pontiff of the war years. He spoke out as much as he could without causing more harm than good. He was a people “set apart” in his attitude toward “imperfect” children, and accepting every child without preconditions.

Historically, Catholics have come to believe these lies. Because of this, Pius’ cause for canonization has been slowed, but not stopped. The truth will eventually come out, and it is likely to make a saint. This book is recommended to those interested in Pope Pius XII and the Holocaust issue.
