We are off Quarantine!
The last of suspended activities resume this week

Curbside Confessions *
- Mondays at St. John • 4:00 - 5:00 pm
- Wednesdays at St. Mary • 4:30 - 5:30 pm

Parking Lot Adoration • Fridays at St. John • 4:30 - 5:30 pm

* Confessions have moved indoors! We will be using Plexiglas barriers, just as we do for the distribution of Holy Communion. However, this Plexiglass barrier is in the shape of an ‘L’ offering a clear view on one side, and a ‘blurred’ side, which will allow for a ‘private’ confession, where the priest and confessor will be unable to see each other. We ask that you please drive into the parking lot as you did with parking lot confessions, and follow the traffic flow to the horseshoe drive in the front of the church. As you exit your car, please put your mask on, and enter the church through the front doors of the church. Attendants will be available to assist.

Hail Mary’s
Since we first congratulated the winner of the 2020 Knights of Columbus Scholarship Award, Delaney Schiefen, we have learned quite a bit more about this remarkable young woman that we would like to share with all of you!

Delaney, daughter of St. John parishioners Deirdre and Steve Schiefen, is not only a face, but a voice many will recognize. In addition to serving on the PPC for the past two years as a representative of our youth, she has also been a member in our Music Ministry since she was in the 2nd grade. As she has grown, so has her talent and involvement, having served in our Christmas and Triduum celebrations, as well being a regularly scheduled cantor at the St. John 8:30 am Mass for the past four years. And her involvement in music, fueled by her love of it, does not end there!

As a freshman at Chelmsford High, Delaney was a founding member of The Crescendos, an A Capella group, in which she was co-president during her senior year. They competed in the International Championship of High School A Capella for three years, being Northeast Semi-Finalists in 2019. Additionally, she has also performed in numerous CHS musicals as well as with the Concert Choir, being a Soprano section leader this past year.

This coming fall, Delaney will be attending the University of Connecticut where she will be enrolled in a 5-year accelerated Masters Program in Music Education; anyone surprised? She has hope of someday being a Music Therapist.

Join us in again congratulating her and wishing her well in all her future endeavors.

Congratulations!
We have now entered into Fiscal Year 2021 which runs July 1, 2020 - June 30, 2021! Due to COVID-19, and our recent staff quarantine, we continue to work on the new budget. Additionally, since the COVID-19 pandemic hit back in March, we are experiencing some delays in getting Finance Reports to you. We are in the process of gathering and organizing Q3 and Year-End data, which we will be presenting soon. We thank you for your patience.

Lastly, due to the staff quarantine, the offertory numbers for the weekends of July 11th/12th and July 18th/19th are not available to report this week. They will be published in next weekend’s bulletin. Thank you for your understanding.

SECOND READING: ROMANS 8: 28-30
How do you think Paul can assert with such certainly: “We now that all things work for good for those who love God?”

GOSPEL READING: MATTHEW 13: 44-52
Jesus offers several “end of the age” parables to the disciples: buried treasure and fine Pearls (a priceless discovery) and the large catch of fish (an inclusive invitation). What do you think Jesus is teaching his disciples about the kingdom of heaven?

WELCOME TO THE SEASON OF FIRST HOLY COMMUNIONS

Beginning last week, and straight through to September, our 2nd graders will be receiving the Gift of the Eucharist for the very first time. They and their families have been so very patient, waiting for the time when this celebration could take place. As we welcome them to the table, let us pray...

O Jesus, You have loved us with such exceedingly great love as to give us the ineffable gift of the Holy Eucharist. Inflame us with a burning zeal to promote Your glory by praying for (our children/ your child’s name) to prepare worthily to approach Your holy table for the first time.

Saint John the Baptist, forerunner of the Messiah, prepare the way for Jesus in the heart of (these children/your child’s name).

Saint Tarcisius, keep safe the children who are making their First Holy Communion.

Congratulations to the following group of children who received their First Communion this past week!

This weekend, their foreheads will be anointed with Sacred Chrism, in the sign of the cross, representing the indelible mark of Christ’s sacrifice on their souls. The sacramental grace of Confirmation will help them to live their faith loyally and profess it courageously, as they are called by Christ to preach not only through their words, but their actions as well. Let us pray for them...

From Our Pastor
I remember when I went to get my first driver’s license. I went to the RMV office in Marlboro. The person I dealt with was a nice lady who really tried to help me. When I was about to take the eye exam, she recommended that I take my glasses off. Her reasoning was that it would be better for me if I passed the eye test without them, in order to avoid the restriction that would be put on my license. I thanked her for her kind suggestion but was very clear that I really could not see without my glasses and, therefore, was okay with taking the exam with them on. She insisted that I try anyway, and so I did what she asked. When I put my face up to the machine, she asked, “Where is the red apple on the picnic table?” I responded, “What picnic table?” She then told me, “Put on your glasses.” Once I put my glasses on, I had no trouble finding the table. I got my license with the restriction for wearing glasses.

Sometimes people create expectations for what we can accomplish, even when we are clear that it is not possible. And, maybe, if you are like me, we sometimes take on those expectations even though we know we cannot accomplish what the other person wants. It is hard at times to accept our own limitations, and it becomes even more difficult when others are prodding us on. We have the desire in us not so much to please people, but to not disappoint them. Or, possibly, we don’t want to admit that we have certain weaknesses. The reality of confronting our limitations is something that can be daunting. This is particularly true when we have to admit that we cannot do the things we could in the past. Honestly, there were things I could do in my 20’s that now, in my 50’s, I can’t do. And, it is not easy to accept these changes. They are one of the biggest issues with expectations and limitations because they tend to be fluid, while we human beings tend to want to reject the idea that we are somehow different. I should always be able to do what I was once able to do. But, alas we cannot!

What is true of life in general can very easily also be true of our lives with God. But the great thing about God is that He meets us where we’re at, and not where He knows we can and should be. Growing in our faith life is not about meeting some preconceived expectation. Growing in our faith life is not about comparing ourselves to where others may be. Growing in our faith life is not about fast-tracking it. Rather, it is about discovering who we are as a person. It is about discerning what our gifts and talents are. It is about taking into account the life we are currently living and how that impacts our understanding of God.

One of my favorite saints is Saint Francis de Sales who wrote an amazing book over 400 years ago. It is called An Introduction to the Devout Life. The aim of the book is to help us understand how one grows in the spiritual life. The great thing about this book is that he takes such a practical way of looking at one’s spiritual life. Furthermore, he makes a most powerful point, one that has remained with me both in my own spiritual growth and in helping others in their spiritual growth. It is simply that the life we are called to live impacts how we are called to be in relationship with God. Not every person is intended to have the exact same spiritual life or prayer life. Hence, an unmarried woman’s spiritual life would be different from that of a married woman. And a woman with children will have a spiritual life different from that of a woman with no children. An unmarried man’s spiritual life would be different from that of a married man. And the spiritual life of a man with children will be different from that of a man with no children. The priest’s life is different from that of the layperson, the religious life is different from that of the non-religious, and so on! It is most important in living out our spiritual life that we do not see one as being better than another; they are simply different. And, in that difference, we must discover the spiritual life we are being called to live out, and through that life how we are called to express it.

What makes sense in one person’s life will not necessarily make sense in another person’s. Therefore, you should not compare your spiritual and prayer life to another’s. Case in point: I generally pray somewhere between 3-4 hours a day. I get up early in the morning to do the bulk of my prayers. Not everyone has the capacity or the framework in their life to do this. What is necessary in my life is not necessary in everyone’s life. I need this time of prayer in order to live the life that God is calling me to. I did not always pray that much, but have grown into it organically. My life has slowly adapted to make this possible.

The question is not about how much you pray, but rather, that you do indeed pray. It is, again, not about comparing yourself to what others may or may not be doing, but in the context of your life, what makes sense. It is recognizing that you need some kind of formal structured prayer life in order to grow spiritually, for growth in a spiritual life is simply about deepening your relationship with God. It is about recognizing who is on the journey of life with me. And it is acknowledging that prayer is simply having a conversation with God, and that God is the one who has begun the conversation. It is accepting the only reason that I do not hear God in my life: because I have chosen not to listen and not to do something about it.

Let us really allow God to introduce Himself to us, but not based on another’s expectations. Let us simply be open to the life God has given us and discover through prayer where He is.

If you have any questions about anything, please do not hesitate to ask me directly, or send your questions to me at fr.brian@chelmsfordcatholic.org.

Please keep me in your prayers.
My husband got sick in the last week of March. By the time we suspected that it was COVID-19, he was truly in danger. The day he was admitted to Lowell General he was intubated. I thank God that there was a bed for him in the ICU. From there he was transferred to a Boston hospital for acute care. He has been in medical care ever since. He has been through trauma and complications and is far from done. Being so sick has left him completely dependent. Now that he’s free of the Coronavirus—he has tested negative several times now—he must regain his mobility, which was lost to him from being four months in bed. And, he’s not done with medical challenges either. The doctors just don’t know how far he will come back. They don’t know how much mobility he will regain, and to what extent, if any, he will be physically disabled. The medical professionals have told me several times over these last months that “things just don’t look good.” Yet each time, my husband has come through, at the surprise of the nurses and doctors. And, as a further challenge, none of us has been able to visit with him for more than an hour in in Boston—suited up and completely covered in hospital safety gear—and, since then, “through the window” visits at the rehabilitation center.

Through all this I have had to quarantine three times! Officially, monitored by the Board of Health and everything. I’ve had just as many months to contemplate the possible outcome of my husband’s long recovery. All this time, family and friends, co-workers and neighbors have been an amazing, tremendous support. We’ve had meals and groceries delivered. We’ve received countless phone calls to check in on us and to ask after my husband’s progress. I have received wonderful, uplifting cards and e-mail messages. I cannot even begin to explain how much it helps; how much it means to know that people care. Plain and simple, people care. So, through the stress of dealing with hospitals, the medical insurance company, the case managers, etc., I know people care. I know I can call any number of individuals for help if I need it and it will be given. I know that everything happening is ordained and that allowing despair to enter in is a wasted effort. I have every confidence that tomorrow, and the next few weeks, and the next few months, will unfold as God alone knows. He is the ultimate comfort, the ultimate being that “cares”. I know, no matter what we face, that we will all be able to face and accept it because of His love. I do not doubt that. I have no reason to. I will face each tomorrow with as much excitement as possible, looking forward to what ever is going to happen next.

St. John Parishioner, Diane Colgan, submitted the following as a follow-up to her first. Thank you, Diane for trusting us with your thoughts again.

Answer To Prayer

In a previous article, I shared how God consoled me after the loss of my son Nicholas. We adopted Nick as an infant after 9 years of marriage, surgery, early years of infertility treatments when it wasn’t covered by health insurance and waiting on a list to adopt with Catholic Charities in Denver for four years. We were elated to finally be parents! We were allowed to apply to adopt again when Nick turned two and were waiting to be assigned a social worker when the Savings and Loan that Jack worked for shut down in the economic crash of 1988. Jack accepted a position with a bank in California and we withdrew from the adoption process in Denver. A reluctant decision on my part; I prayed that if it was God’s will, He would provide an opportunity to adopt again in the future.

Fast forward to 1994, after 3 additional moves we have been in Westford 3 years. After prayer and fasting, I approach Jack about adopting again. We decide to go through Social Services to find a pre-school age girl. After Nick’s death, I learned from our social worker that she had intended to call us on the day of his death to advise us that the social worker of the little girl we found in Springfield would agree to work with us. This door closed because we needed to grieve.

I have a picture of Saint Anne with a young Mary at her knee in my bedroom. Shortly after Nick’s death, I prayed to Saint Anne to give me something to hope for; each day was a struggle to go forward. That day at morning mass, a friend approached me with an ad from St. Anne’s Adoption Agency in Ontario, Canada that specialized in adoptions from Guatemala! We waited a year to grieve Nick’s loss and then pursued an international adoption.

I took a position with the IRS in 1998 to pay for the adoption. We were informed that our daughter, Carolina, was born on April 1, 1998 and the seven month process of the adoption began. Jack withdrew from his position with BayBank when Nick died and a year later took a position with a start-up firm at a decreased salary. He was looking for other work but nothing materialized. We were getting close to the time when we needed to go to Guatemala to get the permission of the US Embassy to bring Carolina home and we needed to show sufficient income. I was stressed to my limit and yelled at God in prayer after morning mass, “Show me the money”! I was talking with two friends in the parking lot of St. John’s when in drove an armored truck! I laughed out loud; God does have a sense of humor! Jack accepted a position with a bank and received his first paycheck the week before we went to Guatemala to bring Carolina home. God has a plan and in His perfect time brings it about.

“Ask and it will be given to you; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened to you...
If you then, who are wicked know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your heavenly Father give good things to those who ask him.” -Matthew 7:7 & 11

CONFRONTING RACISM

Catholic teaching on social justices calls us to work to protect the dignity of all members of our one family by confronting racism in all its forms.

During this significant time in our nation’s history, we must come together as a faith community to be leaders in the fight against racism. This is more than simply not being racist—it is about being actively anti-racist. It is about standing in solidarity with our sisters and brothers who have been harmed by the evil of racism. It is about working to ensure that people of color are treated equally in all aspects of American life.

This will not be an easy journey, but it is one we will embark on together through prayer, listening, and responding. As a first step on this journey, the Collaborative Social Justice Committee is organizing an event this summer to listen to the stories and experiences of members of our community with racism. We are currently seeking people who would be willing to share their stories during this event.

If you would like to speak about your experiences during this event or are interested in learning more about the Social Justice Committee, please email Craig at cbonaceto@gmail.com.
If you would like to request that a Mass be celebrated for a specific intention or person, please call the parish office. A donation of $10 per Mass intention is requested to be made at the time you schedule your intention.
