(8/16/2020)

Last week I mentioned that "canonization" of a Saint means that the person is formally added to the Canon – the official list. We also use this word Canon to refer to the official list of books of the Bible. The Canon of Scripture can be thought of as the Table of Contents, but the term "Canon" carries quite a bit more weight. It reflects the fact that the Magisterium of the Church has determined that these books -and only these books - are inspired by God.

The Scripture canon has been the subject of considerable controversy. Let's look at it.

First, how many books are in the Catholic Canon?

Next, what does "Apocrypha" mean?

Finally (for the real Scripture nerds among us) what does the term "Deuterocanon" mean?

Answer to last week's question (8/9/2020)

The three women native to what is now the United States who have been formally declared "saints" are:

St. Kateri Tekakwitha , sometimes called "Lily of the Mohawks" (ca. 1656–1680), Layperson. She was born in upstate New York and was received into the Church at the age of 19. She took a vow of perpetual virginity and left the Mohawk village, moving to a Jesuit mission in Québec, where she died just five years later. She was declared Venerable in 1943, Beatified by Pope John Paul II in 1980, and Canonized in 2012 by Pope Benedict XVI.

St. Elizabeth Ann Seton (1774–1821), Widow; Founder of the Daughters of Charity of Saint Vincent de Paul in the United States and several affiliated orders. Elizabeth was born to high society in New York City, married and had five children before her husband died. Drawn to the Eucharist, she became a Catholic and went on to lead the first religious order for women founded in America, raising her own children while starting schools for Catholic girls and for the children of the (mostly poor) Catholic immigrants. She died in Maryland when she was just 46. She was declared Venerable in 1959, Beatified in 1963 by Pope John XXIII, and Canonized in 1975 by Pope Paul VI

St. Katharine Mary Drexel (1858–1955), Founder of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for native Americans & African Americans. The Drexel family of Philadelphia was both very wealthy and very devout. The family distributed food and clothing to the poor from their home three days a week. On a trip through the American West Katharine was distressed at the conditions under which the Native people were living. When she was 33 she determined to dedicate her life and her inheritance to providing assistance and education to Native and Black Americans in the West and South. She died at the age of 96, leaving behind a legacy of over a hundred missions and 62 schools for minority children (but not, ironically, her fortune, which under the terms of her father's will went to several other religious orders after she died childless.) Katharine was declared

Venerable in 1987, Beatified in 1988 by Pope John Paul II, and Canonized in 2000 by Pope John Paul II. Both of her confirmed miracles involved someone's being healed of deafness.

During Ordinary time the Lectionary presents stories and teachings from Jesus' everyday ministry. This week's readings focus on the relationship between Israel and the Christian believing community.

Matthew's gospel tells the story of Jesus and the Canaanite woman. While this story tells of a miraculous healing, the narrative also exposes cultural and religious conflicts in Matthew's Jewish-Christian and gentile-Christian ekklesia and suggests how to resolve them.

Cultural conflicts. "Jesus did not ... answer her." In first-century middle eastern culture, Jewish men (especially rabbis) considered it inappropriate to speak to Jewish women in public. When a Canaanite (gentle) woman addresses Jesus the Jew, we shouldn't be surprised that he ignores her. Jesus' response is appropriate to his time and culture.

Religious conflicts. "It is not right to take the children's bread and throw it to dogs." In this saying, "children" are the Israelites, and "dogs" are the gentiles. Jesus softens the saying by using the diminutive κυνάριον (= "puppy" or "house pet"). Jesus' saying affirms biblical and the later Jewish tradition of salvation history: primacy belongs to Israel.

The meaning for Matthew's community. Matthew's ekklesia was mainly Jewish, but it also included gentiles, so relations between Jewish Christians and gentile Christians were a sensitive topic. For gentile members, the story's Canaanite woman's gentile identity was important. For Jewish members, Jesus' affirming Israel's primacy in salvation was important. Jesus' dialogue with the woman offered a model (or at least an explanation) of how Jews and gentiles could coexist in the same community. Matthew's episode preserves Israel's primacy in salvation history and provides gentiles a path to the God of Israel through Jesus the Jew.

This week's readings ask us to think about Christianity's debt to the Jews. Isaiah reminds Israel that gentiles who follow the Law have a place in God's temple. Paul reminds the gentiles that they are saved because God's grace and mercy is freely given to gentiles and Jews. Jesus heals the daughter because her gentile mother has faith in Jesus and the God of Israel. The conflict in Matthew's community is still present today. As Christians, do we recognize our Jewish scriptural, moral, and social justice roots? Do we affirm our indebtedness to Israel as Jesus' own people? Do we stand against anti-Semitism as strongly as we oppose anti-Christian words or actions?

Rev. Henry Lennon (1915) was to lead the completion the upstairs of the new church building. The 1st thing that was done was to purchase the old Fuller residence adjoining the church property for a rectory. In 1916, the upstairs of the church was finished in oak with beautiful pews, new stained-glass windows and a pipe organ. The cost of finishing the church was $30,000.00. The first Mass was held on Easter Sunday and the church was dedicated on June 15, 1916. A campaign was initiated to pay off the church debt of $12,500. In 1919, ninety devoted families and their pastor accomplished that goal and the mortgage was burned by members of the parish community at the Town Hall. The basement was renovated to serve as a Sunday school classroom.

Following the Second Vatican Council and the liturgical changes that were required, the interior of the Church was redecorated in 1966.

In 1976, there was a need to create a Religious Education Facility. Through the donations of many generous parishioners, the Religious Education Center was built and completed in 1977. The building has proven to be of invaluable use for many gatherings, committee meetings, and religious education classes.

In 1987, a three-year fund drive was initiated to repair and renovate the church and Religious Education Center. Later, an elevator was also installed to accommodate our senior and disabled parishioners. In 2008, air conditioning was installed in the church as a result of fundraising. Air-conditioning in the parish hall and sacristy was installed in the winter of 2017.
