1. What is this book about? (describe briefly) This book tells the story about a wealthy couple and a poor homeless man who are called by God to do His will. It is a heartwarming, true tale that is fascinating as it unfolds. It takes place in Fort Worth, Texas, so it is basically local as well. Our three people meet at a mission food kitchen. Over time they develop trusting friendship in each other and in God's plan for them.
2. What main message does the author convey? With trust in God's ultimate wisdom one can do God's will even if we think we are incapable or improbably suited for it. God loves us even when we can't understand why.
3. What inspired you the most about this book, and why would you recommend it?: I loved the last page where the title of the book is explained.
4. Who would benefit from reading this book? It is not a scholarly book, but has a gentle, non-threatening message that is simply told and a pleasure to read.
5. Any other impressions: It is a large print book which for those like me who have poor vision (and hence my initial attraction to it) will be less strain on the eyes.
