SOLEMNITY OF ALL SAINTS

Almighty ever-living God, by whose gift we venerate in one celebration the merits of all the Saints, bestow on us, we pray, through the prayers of so many intercessors, an abundance of the reconciliation with you for which we earnestly long. Through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son, who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, for ever and ever.

THIS WEEK'S GOSPEL MEDITATION

GOSPEL: MATTHEW 5:1-12

The feast of All Saints should inspire us with tremendous hope. Among the saints in heaven are some whom we have known. All lived on earth lives like our own. They were baptized, marked with the sign of faith, they were faithful to Christ's teaching and they have gone before us to the heavenly home whence they call on us to follow them. The Gospel of the Beatitudes, read today, while it shows their happiness, shows, too, the road that they followed; there is no other that will lead us to where they have gone.

A HELPING HAND ON THE FINAL DAY

Every human life is sacred, precious and eternal. Once conceived, regardless of circumstances, every human life from its microscopic beginnings, grows towards the goal of reaching out to the light of a first day and then towards the light of an eternal day.

The first day of November, a Sunday this year, begins with the celebration of All Saints' Day. It marks our recognition of the eternal blueprint God has woven into every conceivable human life – seeing Him face-to-face in all His glory and goodness. This is the reason God brought into being the uniqueness of the universe and humanity at its center.

The second day of November and the whole month see us remembering those who have died, acknowledging that we too will die and that we should support each other, both the living and the dead towards that final goal of literally seeing God face-to-face through Christ Himself. In order to do so, we will always have to close our eyes.

We close our eyes when we pray, every night when we sleep and also when we enter into the final rest of our last day. All of us have loved ones, family, friends and acquaintances who have closed their eyes and entered into their final rest. And, one day, each one of us will also join those who have gone before us and enter into this same rest.

But for now, because the bonds of love and friendship are still very much part of our everyday lives, when we close our eyes in prayer, remembering those who rest in the peace of God, we pray that in their rest, they will not be disturbed but that their spirit will be comforted by a vision of the love and mercy of God.

This rest in the sleep that death initiates is not everlasting. On that last day, when the Kingdom of God will finally itself restore all of us to immortality both physically and spiritually in a new creation, together we will all rise from our sleep to witness a new heaven and a new earth.

So why do we pray for those who have died if we all will, on that final day of restoration, rise from the dead in the same manner that Christ did on Easter Sunday? Maybe, a good way to think about it is that we all need a helping hand to wipe the sleep from our eyes and help us out of bed! We can remember the words of Christ after He raised the little girl from the dead. He told her family to support her by giving her something to eat. And when Christ raised Lazarus from the grave, Our Lord instructed the family to untie the strips of cloth that were wrapped around His once dead friend.

In very much the same way, our prayers for those who have died lend a helping hand of comfort and support. This is often depicted in paintings of the Last Judgement, even our own one inside the church. St. Paul reminds us that the dead will not all be resurrected at the same time. First, of course, has been Christ. Then, through the power of His own resurrection, everyone else “but each one in proper order”. A good way to imagine this “chain reaction”, is that those to whom our love reached out to in friendship, devotion and prayer, will, after their own resurrection, lend us a helping hand to take our own first baby steps after our own resurrection on that final day. First steps in any direction are always scary.

When we were born, we needed a helping hand and encouragement to eventually get to our feet and stand up straight. For all who are to be born again into eternal life, our prayer for them is likewise. And when they get to their feet, let's hope they will help us to do likewise, through Christ our Lord.
