First Sunday of Lent

Reflecting on the Word – Luke 9:28b-36
At the Transfiguration, the three Apostles are allowed to view Jesus in his divinity. They knew Jesus as human, and now they have a glimpse of his divine nature. In this instance, Peter, James, and John are allowed another perspective of Jesus. During Lent, we will not enter a cloud as the Apostles did, but we can give ourselves a chance to see ourselves, one another, and creation with different eyes. If you could see how you and those around you are made in the image of God, what would you see?

- What might God's vision reveal in you?
- Moses and Elijah stand with Jesus in today's Gospel. Who inspires and stands with you?

MARRIAGES

TIP#6 Hug for 2 minutes and kiss for 30 seconds each day.

"Often, kisses and hugs become mechanical and quick," says marriage and family therapist Kim Blackham. The problem: Those hurried pecks and embraces don't offer the same feel-good benefits longer stretches of physical intimacy do. "Oxytocin, a chemical our bodies release when we touch one another, emotionally connects people," says Blackham. No need to set a timer, says Blackham, but do extend your hugs and kisses longer than you normally would; you'll feel a new sense of connection.

How to Raise a Gen Z Kid
(Mid-1990s-Mid-2000s)

Tip#6. The next generation deserves to taste failure to understand success. All parents want to shield their children from hardship, but failing comes with valuable lessons. Millennials' mothers and fathers tended to play the role of "helicopter parent," buffering their sons and daughters from social and emotional blows. This has done a disservice to their children, and Millennials have had to learn to fail gracefully on their own. Members of Generation Z are pragmatic and practical; they understand the concept of winning and losing. At the same time, they may still over-rely on hovering parents to "save" them when they make mistakes. Intervene sparingly: You may not like to see your child flop, but learning to pick himself up can lead to sweet self-realizations.

No one gets a link to a downloadable manual when they have a child. Parents have to figure out their children based on what they know. Still, having a better understanding of Generation Z can help mothers and fathers foster better relationships with this emerging generation of excited, positive, fascinating individuals
