Reflecting on the Word – John 8: 3-11

We hear of condemnation in the news, at school, and at work. Often, we have no trouble handing out judgements and may be hardest on ourselves. Perhaps that's why we are quick to throw stones at others. When we are alarmed by a weakness or imperfection in another, we might want to consider how that defect is manifested in our lives. Instead of concentrating on the wrong, we can seek to identify with the person and become a companion in compassion.

-When have you criticized another? What part of the person reminded you of yourself?

-How can we help those who have gone astray?

Oímos condena en las noticias, en la escuela y en el trabajo. A menudo, no tenemos problemas para emitir juicios y podemos ser más duros con nosotros mismos. Quizás es por eso que somos rápidos para lanzar piedras a otros. Cuando estamos alarmados por una debilidad o imperfección en otro, podríamos considerar cómo ese defecto se manifiesta en nuestras vidas. En lugar de concentrarnos en el mal, podemos tratar de identificarnos con la persona y convertirnos en un compañero compasivo. - ¿Cuándo has criticado a otro? ¿Qué parte de la persona te recordó a ti mismo? - ¿Cómo podemos ayudar a los que se han extraviado?
