Federal Court Upholds Ohio Ban On Aborting Babies Because Of Down Syndrome

A federal appeals court ruled April 13, that Ohio may enforce its ban on abortions based on a diagnosis of Down syndrome.

The 6th Circuit Court of Appeals said in a 9-7 decision that Ohio's law was "valid in all conceivable cases" and that it did not substantially block a woman's ability to get an abortion. The law, which was challenged by Planned Parenthood and other abortion providers, prohibits a person from performing an abortion on a pregnant woman seeking the abortion because her baby has Down syndrome.

NIH Reverses Restrictions on Fetal Tissue Research

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) on Friday reversed restrictions on federally-funded research using fetal tissue and organs of aborted babies.

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) said in a notice to the "extramural research community" – researchers who are not at NIH facilities – that it would be removing the Trump administration's 2019 requirement that a federal ethics advisory board review all proposals for fetal tissue research.

Tom McClusky, president of March for Life Action, called the announcement "very disappointing. This type of experimental research is a gross violation of human dignity and is not where the majority of Americans want their tax dollars being spent. The government has no business creating a marketplace for aborted baby body parts," he said. MAKING FATHERS PAY

A new law in Utah requires fathers to pay for half of the mother's cost of pregnancy — making Utah the first state to mandate prenatal child support from the father. Jean Hill of the Archdiocese of Salt Lake City's Office of Life, Justice, and Peace said: "In our view, the law is a positive pro-life measure to help women who want to keep their baby but feel overwhelmed by the costs."

25 Christian Universities Have Ties to Planned Parenthood Abortion Biz

Students for Life of America released a new investigation that exposes ties between 25 Christian universities and the billion-dollar abortion chain Planned Parenthood. A few even describe Planned Parenthood as a "trusted resource" on their websites.

The Catholic universities on the list include: Fordham University (NY), Saint Joseph's University (PA), Saint Norbert College (WI), Trinity Washington University (D.C.).

Students for Life aims to document every Christian school in the U.S. that partners with the abortion chain in some capacity. Thus far, the pro-life organization has examined more than 700 colleges and universities.

AT-HOME ABORTIONS

The administration cited the coronavirus pandemic as a reason to authorize the prescription of the abortion pill mifepristone through the mail. This new policy will allow at-home, self-administered abortions. "With this action, the administration has made it clear that it will prioritize abortion over women's safety. Allowing unsupervised chemical abortions via telemedicine, without requiring timely access to medical care, will put women in grave danger," said Jeanne Mancini, president of the March for Life.

WALMART PROMOTES LGBTQ LIFESTYLE

In 2014 they gave a major grant to the Victory Fund, a group that helps elect openly homosexual candidates, and in June of the same year they ran a full page pro-LGBT ad in the New York City Pride Guide. In 2019 Walmart ran an online ad as part of a campaign called "Love is in the aisle: A dating show at Walmart", which featured two homosexual men on a "blind date" as they meet at the store and shop together to discover whether or not they are compatible. Now in 2021 Walmart is offering the Queer Eye Home Collection. American Family Assoc. of PA 4/23/21

“The Good Doctor” Thrills Viewers When Shaun and Lea Choose Life for Their Baby Instead of Abortion

In the March 22 episode of ABC’s The Good Doctor, titled “Teeny Blue Eyes”, Dr. Shaun Murphy and his girlfriend debate going through with an unplanned pregnancy.

Clearly, they both want a baby but are nervous about how their lives will change and doubts cloud their judgment. The decision to abort their baby seems half-hearted. Yet, the appointment is made and they go to the clinic.

Then, fortunately, they admit that this isn’t the decision they want and decide to go through with the pregnancy. Lea was trying to tell herself it was “a good idea,” but having the abortion “doesn’t make [her] feel any better.” In fact, “it just makes [her] feel really sad.”

It’s good news! Ending the life of an unborn baby over whether or not the timing is perfect is beyond nauseating. The pro-abortion industry has tried to train people to think it is a “good idea,” but like Lea said, abortion only brings sadness. At least, in this case, the ending is a happy one.

FORMER TRANS WOMAN

Walt Heyer, a former transgender woman, praised laws banning transgender procedures for minors because children are “too young to be doing these procedures.”

Heyer underwent cross-gender hormone therapy and obtained a surgical gender change in 1983 at age 42. He now runs the website Sex Change Regret to raise awareness about the dangers of sex changes.

“They end up mutilating their bodies and destroying their lives, and by the time they’re 21 or 22 years old, they wish they’d never done it,” Heyer said.

The Truth on Weed

The marijuana on the market today isn’t close to the same pot of the 60s and 70s. It has been developed by the Big Tobacco Industry to be unnaturally and dangerously potent, highly addictive, and harmful to children and all of society. Think: Big Tobacco.

Any benefits to states are over-exaggerated. For example, did you know that for states that have legalized marijuana, tax revenues from the industry are less than one-percent of their state budgets? Don’t count on marijuana sales to be paying for our schools or roads. What it will be doing is increasing car accidents, addiction, family strain, work-place accidents, and more.

BABY BODY PARTS

The watchdog group Judicial Watch released a 600-page report that confirmed that the U.S. government had been buying body parts from children who were aborted. Emails obtained by Judicial Watch confirm that the Food and Drug Administration spent tens of thousands of dollars for scientific experiments from 2012 until 2018, when the Trump administration terminated the contract.

Abortion Activists Vandalize Pro-Life Billboard, Change Wording to Promote Abortions

A pro-abortion Mississippi group admitted to vandalizing a Christian billboard this week in reaction to state leaders’ efforts to protect unborn babies from abortion.

WTOK 11 reports Christian Aid Ministries purchased the billboard along Interstate 22 West in Byhalia, Mississippi. The message reads, “Worried? Jesus offers security,” along with a phone number for the ministry.

Recently, however, abortion activists vandalized the billboard, changing the message to say, “Worried? Planned Parenthood offers abortions.”

Kellogg’s Pro-Homosexual “Pride” Cereal

Hitting some main chain grocery stores in May, Kellogg’s created a new, “Together with Pride” rainbow-colored, heart-shaped cereal. The cereal will cost $3.99, and for every box purchased, Kellogg’s will be donating $3.00 to a pro-homosexual organization, GLAAD, if customers can prove they purchased the cereal. The pro-homosexual agenda is using this as a means to normalize unnatural sin and a harmful lifestyle. The American Society for Defense of Tradition 4/23/21
