Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish Mission Statement

Rooted in the gospel, we are a Christ centered community guided by the Holy Spirit, embracing a future full of hope, empathy and compassion, reaching out to all, especially the marginalized, seniors and the youth.

SEEKING GOD IN THE REAL WORLD ...

We speak today of the gap between the Church and secular society, but it is nothing new. Once the Church became an accepted part of society under the Roman Empire, the first monks or desert fathers fled their life with God in the wilderness. Then in the 6th century St. Benedict was sent from his country town of Norcia in Umbria, Italy, to pursue his studies in Rome. He found the city so disturbing and decadent that he fled back to Subiaco in the deepest wilderness and developed his life of prayer and community there.

In similar fashion Blessed Charles de Foucauld in the late 19th century left his life in the army, became a priest but then left a comfortable life in France to go to live with the Tuareg in the Sahara in Algeria. There he would eventually be assassinated by bandits and is considered a martyr by the Church. Both are remembered by the communities they founded, which would go on to expand throughout the world.

A different approach was taken by St. Philip Neri, who in the 16th century would be called the "apostle of Rome." At a time when Rome was demoralized he brought together a group of young men for worship and to bring aid to pilgrims and sick people. He used humanity and humor to disarm his opponents, and he was one of the first to help lay people discover their Christian life in their secular occupations.

Today's Gospel comes from a chapter of Mark that is concerned with how to live a good and truthful life in the real world. Jesus discusses marriage and children, property and possessions, power and privilege. The children are perhaps the keystone to understanding his teaching. His disciples try to send the children away, but Jesus rebukes them, takes the children into his arms and blesses them – for of such are the kingdom of God. Just as the chapter will end with the story of the blind beggar, Bartimaeus, who become the image of true discipleship, so the children, who are powerless and insignificant in the eyes of society, become the image of those who understand and practice the presence of God in the world.

But the man who then runs up and kneels before Jesus is the image of one who is too rich and powerful to make this move. He undoubtedly has the potential; but he cannot overcome the obstacle of his wealth. This exchange upsets the disciples, for they have been conditioned to believe that wealth is a sign of God's love and approval. If it is as hard as Jesus suggests, however, for a rich person to enter the kingdom, how can anyone achieve it?

Jesus reassures them in two ways. First of all, what is impossible for humans is not impossible for God. Secondly, those who, like his disciples, give up everything for him will receive overwhelming recompense both now and in eternity. The message remains clear: to become like little children in their powerlessness is the way to God's favour.

The solution of the Church in the Middle Ages to the problem of the disparity between rich and poor Christians was to instruct the rich to use what was over and above their needs to benefit those less fortunate than themselves. But this does not quite express what Jesus is saying in the Gospel.

Just as Jesus asks his disciples for their full commitment to him, so here he invites the rich young man to strip himself of his wealth and follow him. Through the ages many young rich have listened to these words and responded by leaving their world of luxury in pursuit of Christ.

Our ability to make such a full response, to become such a disciple, is modelled on the image of the child. It is not a call to behave childishly. Rather it is a call to live a life based on vulnerability and insignificance, as one of those who don't matter from a worldly viewpoint. If we are too worried about our image in the eyes of others, if we are too dependent on what the world can offer us as prizes, we will struggle to understand this calling.

If we are unworried about our image and have a certain freedom in relation to worldly goods and rewards, we have made the first move.

Avow – Vocation Discernment Groups for Catholic Women

Every woman is called to make a gift of herself in love. Discovering the form the gift will take is the art of discernment. Avow is a small group for Catholic women, ages 18 to 35, who gather for heart-to-heart conversation and study as they embark on the journey of discernment together. Avow is not a program to recruit or convince you of your vocation; rather it is designed to create an atmosphere of freedom and openness for the authentic pursuit of the Father's will.

Windsor-Essex & Surrounding Regions: Meetings are held monthly. Please contact Maureen at the Madonna House, Windsor at mhwindsor@dol.ca
