...for God gave us a spirit not of fear but of power and love and self-control. 2 Timothy 1:7

We follow the rules that God has set before us not out of fear but out of love. And love directs us to self-control. But that is not particular to our relationship with God. We exercise self-control in many ways, with our families, with our spouses, with our co-workers. The list could go on. We do not treat others well out of fear. Why would we consider our obedience to God to be based on fear alone? If that is the way that you relate to God then maybe you need to rethink the relationship.
