Contribute to the needs of the saints and seek to show hospitality. Romans 12:13

Charity is a cornerstone of being a Christian. Without it, how do we differentiate ourselves from the others? And that is not to say that other faith backgrounds lack charity. But we are specifically called to it. St. Paul reminds us of the importance of charity both here and in the First Letter to the Corinthians. The end of his discourse on the nature of love is the statement that the greatest of all virtues is love. So if we are lacking in love, we need to examine our beliefs and our practices. Worship without charity and love is pointless.
