Twenty-First Sunday in Ordinary Time

We had our Fiftieth high school class reunion last weekend. We had such a great class, and we've all stayed close. We even have a prayer chain to support the needs of all our classmates.

I'm sad, though, when I think of the wistfulness with which people I encountered in the days before the reunion said, "Oh, that sounds so neat." I could hear the regret they carried for not keeping in touch, not having a community of old friends. I could tell that they long for the things they left behind.

In some ways, we have to leave things behind. We move. We have careers and families. We are taken up with the immediate demands of our lives. Over time, the old friends fade. We put those long-ago days in their proper perspective. We move on. And then one day, decades later, some silly woman is showing you her nails, decked out in her school colors, that she had done for her high school class reunion that weekend. And you sigh, and say, "Oh, that sounds so neat."

I think of that wistfulness when I read about the Master of the house coldly telling those who knock desperately on his door, "I don't know where you're from." Our churches cry out for the millions who have left us, their absence an ache at every Mass. Their reasons are legion, the sexual abuse scandals probably topping the long list.

But in a world that offers fake friends, a glance at any parish bulletin shows the many enriching offerings of education, prayer and community that welcome anyone who is hungry, or wistful, for the things he or she may have left behind.

What part of the spiritual life are you longing to return to, or create yourself?

Vigésimo-Primer Domingo de Tiempo Ordinario

Este fin de semana asistimos a una reunión con los compañeros de preparatoria conmemorando el aniversario número 50 de nuestra graduación. Nuestra clase era fantástica, y todos nos hemos mantenido en contacto. Inclusive tenemos una cadena de oración para apoyar las necesidades de nuestros compañeros de clases.

Aunque me siento un poco triste, recordando la nostalgia que vi en algunas personas con las que platicaba días antes de la reunión que me decían, "Oh, que lindo." Pude detectar el remordimiento que sentían por no haberse mantenido en contacto, de no tener una comunidad de viejos amigos. Pude ver que añoraban las cosas que habían dejado en el pasado.

De algunas formas, debemos dejar ciertas cosas. Debemos seguir en movimiento. Tenemos carreras y familias. Estamos tan sumergidos en las demandas inmediatas de nuestras vidas. Al pasar del tiempo, los viejos amigos se desvanecen. Colocamos esos días del pasado en su apropiada perspectiva. Seguimos adelante. Y entonces un día, décadas después, una mujer ocurrente te muestra sus uñas, pintadas con los colores de su escuela, que se acaba de arreglar para su reunión de preparatoria que será ese fin de semana. Y tú suspiras y dices, “Oh, que lindo.”

Pienso en esa melancolía cuando leo del amo de la casa que fríamente le dice a aquel que desesperadamente le toca la puerta, “No sé de donde eres.” Nuestras iglesias lloran a los millones que nos han dejado, su ausencia duele en cada Misa. Sus motivos son legión, los escándalos de abuso sexual probablemente estén en lo más alto de su lista.

No obstante, en este mundo digital que ofrece falsos amigos, un vistazo a cualquier boletín de cualquier iglesia nos muestra las tantas enriquecedoras ofertas de educación, oración y comunidad que le dan la bienvenida a cualquiera que esté hambriento, o nostálgico por aquellas cosas que él o ella haya dejado atrás.
