Twenty-Seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

There is a compelling documentary on Netflix right now. It's called The Social Dilemma, I assume to stand in contrast to the 2010 movie The Social Network, which tells the story of Mark Zuckerberg and the founding of Facebook.

This docudrama features some of the main architects of the most addicting features of Facebook, Google, Twitter and others. These creators admit their horror at what their creations have wrought: sky-high rates of depression and suicide, disinterest in everything one loved before, lethargy and sadness. These are all the markers of addiction, and it has to do with the dopamine delivery to the brain (and, so tragically often, the young brain) that sets up a higher and higher need to click, click, click.

I think of what is probably a global pandemic of internet addiction as I read St. Paul's brilliant advice to the infant church at Philippi. If every person googling through their favorite internet sites would use Paul's checklist before clicking deeper in, or, God forbid, sharing the link, the increasing anxiety of our society could be healed.

So, here's the checklist. Is it true? There are ways to check before you head out to free the trafficked children held in the basement of the pizza parlor. Answer: untrue. Is it honorable? Any call to arms you read on the internet is certainly dishonorable. Is it just? Sometimes social media educates us on justice issues, especially if they come from the Vatican or Catholic Charities. Is it pure? Lovely? Gracious? Ah, just thinking on those things raises endorphins and brings us to that peace which passes the understanding of those who troll the 'net, hoping to devour our souls.

What rules do you have in your house about screen time?

Vigésimoséptimo Domingo de Tiempo Ordinario

Hay un nuevo documental en Netflix. Se llama The Social Dilemma (El Dilema Social), y me parece que es lo contrario de la película del 2010 The Social Network (La Red Social), que cuenta la historia de Mark Zuckerberg y los orígenes de Facebook.

Este docu-drama presenta a algunos de los principales arquitectos de las características más adictivas de Facebook, Google, Twitter y otros. Estos creadores admiten el horror que sienten al ver lo que sus creaciones han causado: índices altísimos de depresión y suicidio, desinterés en las cosas que a uno le encantaban antes, apatía y tristeza. Todas estas son síntomas de adicción, y todo tiene que ver con la liberación de dopamina al cerebro (y, trágicamente muy a menudo, al cerebro joven) que causa una necesidad cada vez mayor de hacer clic, clic, clic.

Pienso en lo que probablemente sea una pandemia global de adicción al internet mientras leo el consejo brillante de San Pablo a la naciente iglesia de Filipos. Si cada persona que usa el google para buscar sus sitios favoritos de internet consultara la lista de Pablo antes de hacer mas clics, o, que Dios no permita, compartir el link, sanaríamos la creciente ansiedad de nuestra sociedad.

Aquí les va la lista. ¿Es verdadero? Existen maneras de revisar antes de encaminarse a liberar a los niños traficados que tienen escondidos en el sótano del restaurante de pizzas. Respuesta: no es verdadero. ¿Es recto? Cualquier grito de guerra que leas en el internet definitivamente no es recto. ¿Es Justo? A veces las redes sociales nos educan acerca de temas de justicia, especialmente si vienen del Vaticano o de Caridades Católicas. ¿Es puro? ¿Amable? ¿Agradable? Ah, sólo de pensar en estas cosas sentimos que se nos elevan las endorfinas y obtenemos una paz que sobrepasa el entendimiento de aquellos que trolean por la red buscando devorar nuestras almas.

¿Qué reglas tienes en la casa acerca de cuanto tiempo se debe estar frente una pantalla?
