

ECUMENICAL CLERGY AT ROMAN CATHOLIC LITURGIES

All non-Roman Catholic clergy are treated as ecumenical clergy. The Caeremoniale Episcoporum indicates that non-concelebrating clergy walk in procession before the deacon carrying the Book of the Gospels. Ecumenical clergy are seated separately from Latin rite clergy.

Ecumenical clergy may vest in what they think is appropriate for the liturgical celebration. It is better to let them decide in what order they want to arrange themselves in the procession (as this avoids the Church appearing biased).

Note from a phone conversation with the Reverend James Moroney, Executive Director of the BCL, September 23, 1993.
