A SURVEY OF THE BIBLE – EPHESIANS

Ephesians is one of the captivity epistles along with Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon. The author of all four indicates that he is writing from prison. The letter is among the most doctrinal of all the Pauline letters. It is a synthesis and development of theological concepts found in earlier epistles ascribed to Paul.

In the earlier epistles, the emphasis was on the justification and salvation of the individual. However, Ephesians emphasizes the union and reconciliation in Christ of two groups, the Jews and the Gentiles.

Scholars disagree as to the authorship of the letter. If Paul was the author, then it is probable that Paul wrote the letter during his first Roman imprisonment in A.D. 60-62. Scholars who argue against direct Pauline authorship are not in agreement on the date of its writing, though some argue that it must have been written in the last quarter of the first century.

The epistle may be divided as follows: the position of the Christian (1:1 through 3:21); and the practice of the Christian (4:1 through 6:20).

In today's second reading (2 Corinthians 3:1-6), St. Paul speaks of the believers in Corinth as being letters of Christ written on their hearts, known and read by all. Through the believers in Corinth, and through the generations of Christians since then, that same letter is written on our hearts. This raises the question, how faithful are we to that letter? When people "read" us by listening to what we say and observing what we do are they hearing the letter of Christ or some redacted version of that letter edited to suit our needs?

Grace and peace,
Fr. Tom
